

Where Is the Boreal Forest?

The boreal forest is our planet's largest land-based biome. Also called taiga, the forest stretches in northern regions, forming a vast carpet the width of the world. Only about 10% of the forest is in Canada. Twenty-nine percent is in Russia. Other cool northern areas, like Alaska and Scandinavia, also have boreal forests.

There are many types of habitats in the boreal forest. These habitats provide homes for a diversity of species. There are birds in the forest and mammals in the tundra. There are fish and frogs in the rivers and the lakes. Some species stay all year. Others only visit.

Parts of the boreal forest are remote. The forests have never been there. But the boreal forest affects everyone. Its trees clean our air, and its wetlands clean our water. The forests also store global climate change. It is a vast – and vital – wilderness.

A Watery Wood

There's more fresh water in the boreal forest than anywhere else on Earth – with more than 60 billion reservoir lakes in Canada alone.
