explains how a child's early experiences influence their particular behaviours towards different people and different situations. Throughout the book Maria Robinson considers the key characteristics of effective learning and shows how play is one of the key mechanisms that children use in their discovery of themselves and the world around them. These characteristics are then applied to integral aspects of early years practice to help practitioners to support children to come to new understandings in safe yet challenging ways. The ways in which children may approach or withdraw from learning opportunities reflect on their own teaching methods to encourage children's engagement, motivation and creativity through effective observation and planning. The book engages with parents and carers to help support children's learning at home whilst maintaining the values of the family, celebrates the uniqueness of each child and provides learning experiences that are appropriate for individuals with particular learning needs, be they physical, emotional or cognitive, to ensure that every child has an equal opportunity to succeed. Emphasising the importance of understanding the theory that underpins children's emotional development, this accessible text shows practitioners how they can use this knowledge to provide learning opportunities that nourish children's thinking and creative skills.
