An Analysis of the Film "Brassed Off" Elisa Valerie Thieme, 2014-10-31 Studienarbeit aus dem Jahr 2013 im Fachbereich Anglistik Kultur und Landeskunde Note 1,7 Johannes Gutenberg Universität Mainz Department of English and Linguistics Veranstaltung The North of England Sprache Deutsch

Abstract In 2001 Paul Marris argued in an essay which appeared in Cineaste that the tradition of northern realism could be traced back to Elizabeth Gaskell's social problem novels which announced many of the themes and approaches that have underpinned the traditional representation of the North up to the present a documentary interest in the industrial urban districts a realism which is in tension with melodramatic devices the incorporation of elements of demotic speech a continuing association between northernness and the industrial working class and a portrayal from the vantage point which is not wholly within The reliance on stereotypes is probably partly related to the fact that most works of art documentaries and studies concerning the northern working class have been written and conducted by members of the middle class Therefore general notions about the working class are often arrived at by following track of what the middle class thinks of it According to Ian Christie British cinema's most successful genre of the 90s was the tragicomedy of urban survival Particularly northern film always aroused certain expectations and was often a site for debating serious moral economic and social issues Along with films such as Trainspotting Danny Boyle 1996 and The Full Monty Peter Cattaneo 1997 the movie Brassed Off Mark Herman 1996 certainly belongs into this genre of northern tragicomedy It is a Channel Four film production which made use of a popular format with two or three star names and a host of British character actors and is situated at a moment of closure of one of the Yorkshire coalfields Interestingly Brassed Off is set in 1992 but was in fact produced in 1996 and one might argue that some extra sharpness might have been acquired if the script had been made in the 1980s when the industrial north was truly in the grip of recession and that Brassed Off is almost a period piece Bromley states that Brassed Off's works within a number of staple and formulaic conventions of workingclass representation regional masculine industrial brass band

Stereotypes about Northerners are reinforced in the scene Rodrigo's Concierto de Aranjuez in the film "Brassed Off" Julia Wehner, 2012-02-29 Seminar paper from the year 2011 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Culture and Applied Geography grade 2 3 University of Duisburg Essen language English abstract Stereotypes are human nature and can never be avoided completely However stereotypes about Northern England and Northerners seem to be particularly deep rooted and longlasting There is general agreement that they date from the 18th and 19th century when Northern England was the starting point of the Industrial Revolution Jewell 2 When we speak of stereotyped characters we are dealing in particular with traditions deriving from the effects of the Industrial Revolution Morris 9 The stereotypical Northerners are working class people not well educated and their lives are full of struggle and conflict According to many preconceptions a male Northerner is unhealthy badly dressed and frank about sex Further clich attributes are pragmatic direct and even rude but also down to earth passionate and heartily Northerners feel alienated from the government in the centre London and distinguish between us and them which creates to a strong sense of community In today's pop culture these stereotypes are predominantly media transmitted By using a certain mode of presenting Northern English reality and its inhabitants stereotypes are rather reinforced than replaced in the media Hence there is a specific pattern used to reinforce stereotypes about Northern England and Northerners in films such as in the film Brassed off The most striking features that intensify these clichés in Brassed off are setting language protagonists and 4 topics All these characteristics can be found in the scene when the Grimley Colliery Band practices Rodrigo's Concierto de Aranjuez thus this scene reinforces stereotypes about Northern England to a large extent
