Gender and Technology in the Making Cynthia Cockburn, Susan Ormrod, 1993-12-07 This innovative book demonstrates the making of gender and technology as comparable social processes one helping shape the other The authors take as an example the microwave oven a recent innovation in domestic technology that neatly encapsulates the technology gender relation In the microwave masculine engineering encounters an age-old woman's technology cooking The authors show how the microwave begins as a state-of-the-art masculine technology is translated in the retail trade into a family commodity one of a range of domestic white goods and eventually settles into the kitchen alongside other humble feminine appliances unlike the old cooker however the microwave retains just a whiff of aftershave The au The Honey Gatherer by Jeff Tikari Jeff Tikari, 2015-10-13 THE HONEY GATHERER The story is set in a sparsely populated tract of the heavily forested foothills of the Himalayas an area that lies roughly between India and Nepal and in places is virtually untouched The Forest People of this area have minimal contact with the outside world and dwell entirely in the forest living off its produce These are the Wild Honey Gatherers a race almost extinct they have strange ways and are rumored to possess the ability to communicate with birds and beasts When encountered they fade into the forest shadows Village people give them a wide berth fearing the strange occult or shaman powers they possess The forest Spirits protect them is a widely held belief This story is about one such family its secrets its mystical powers and its accord with nature Written in a style that suits today's fast-paced lifestyle where an elegance of words and precise sentences open up forest vistas that draw you into the lives and customs of the Honey Gatherers Final Cut: stories Kory M.
