Boy And The Dog Are Sleeping:

The Boy and the Dog are Sleeping Nasdijj, 2003 Nasdijj's critically acclaimed award winning memoir The Blood Runs Like a River Through My Dreams took the literary world by storm. An authentic important book raved Esquire. Unfailingly honest and very nearly perfect. Now this celebrated Native American writer has given readers a powerful brave and deeply moving memoir of the unconditional love between a father and a son. Eleven year old Awee came to live with Nasdijj carrying a brown paper bag containing all his belongings a legacy of abuse and AIDS. But this beautiful loving and intelligent little boy also had enormous hope for his new life. The Boy and the Dog Are Sleeping is the heart rending but also joyous story of this untraditional little family filled with love and laughter but also with great pain as Awee became progressively more ill. Nasdijj writes about their motorcycle trip to see the ocean for the first time about baths and baseball about Awee's big brother Crow Dog and his dog Navajo but also about the brutal realities of reservation life and the challenges of dealing with a sometimes hostile medical establishment that often lacks the knowledge to treat pediatric AIDS. In the end Nasdijj must find his own way of alleviating Awee's suffering and of helping him maintain his dignity in the face of a disease that gradually robs him of himself. By turns searing and searching lyrical and raw The Boy and the Dog Are Sleeping is ultimately transcendent for in the end Awee got what he wanted most in his short life a real dad.

Studies on Turkish and Turkic Languages Ashl Göksel, Celia Kerslake, 2000 This book contains papers presented at the Ninth International conference on Turkish Linguistics held in Oxford in August 1998. The papers cover a wide range of topics in theoretical and descriptive linguistics relating to Turkish and Turkic languages bringing together the work of the most eminent researchers in the field. In addition to articles in the core areas of linguistics which focus on topics such as the morpho syntactic properties of argument structure word stress aspect and modality word order embedding cliticisation and compounding there are sections on psycholinguistics language acquisition discourse analysis language contact and bilingualism. Although the main language of investigation is Modern Turkish the articles cover a wide range of Turkic languages including Karaim Eynu Sarigh Yoghur Salar Gagauz Noghay Khalaj and Iraqi Turkmen some of which are endangered as well as historic varieties such as Middle Turkish Old Anatolian Turkish and Old Turkic. The book will be of interest to linguists working on theoretical comparative and diachronic aspects of linguistic research as well as those who are interested in descriptive aspects of Turkish and other Turkic languages.

Relating Events in Narrative Ruth A. Berman, Dan Isaac Slobin, 2013-06-17 This volume represents the culmination of an extensive research project that studied the development of linguistic form function relations in narrative discourse. It is unique in the extent of data which it analyzes more than 250 texts from children and adults speaking five different languages and in its crosslinguistic typological focus. It is the first book to address the issue of how the structural properties and rhetorical preferences of different native languages English German Spanish Hebrew and Turkish impinge on narrative abilities across different phases of development. The work of Berman and Slobin and their colleagues provides insight into the interplay between shared possibly universal patterns in the developing ability to create well constructed globally organized narratives among preschoolers from three years of age compared with school children and adults contrasted against the impact of typological and rhetorical features of particular native languages on how speakers express these abilities in the process of relating events in narrative This volume also makes a special contribution to the field of language acquisition and development by providing detailed analyses of how linguistic forms come to be used in the service of narrative functions such as the expression of temporal relations of simultaneity and retrospection perspective taking on events and textual connectivity To present this information the authors prepared in depth analyses of a wide range of linguistic systems including tense aspect marking passive and middle voice locative and directional predications connectivity markers null subjects and relative clause constructions In contrast to most work in the field of language acquisition this book focuses on developments in the use of these early forms in extended discourse beyond the initial phase of early language development The book offers a pioneering approach to the interactions between form and function in the development and use of language from a typological linguistic perspective The study is based on a large crosslinguistic corpus of narratives elicited from preschool school age and adult subjects All of the narratives were elicited by the same picture storybook Frog Where Are You by Mercer Mayer An appendix lists related studies using the same storybook in 50 languages The findings illuminate both universal and language specific patterns of development providing new insights into questions of language and thought
