perspective on the Liberator's oratorical skills along with the general perception of O'Connell as shaped by the press of his age. What rhetorical strategies did O'Connell implement in order to persuade the Catholics of Ireland that he was the man to make their voice heard by the British authorities? How were O'Connell's figure, his followers, and his ideology assessed by nationalist and unionist print media? The volume addresses these research questions by combining the study of public speaking with news discourse within an integrated approach to the Irish public sphere in the early 1840s.

Modernization, Nation-Building, and Television History Stewart Anderson, Melissa Chakars, 2014-11-20. This innovative collection investigates the ways in which television programs around the world have highlighted modernization and encouraged nation building. It is an attempt to catalogue and better understand the contours of this phenomenon which took place as television developed and expanded in different parts of the world between the 1950s and the 1990s. From popular science and adult education shows to news magazines and television plays, few themes so thoroughly penetrated the small screen for so many years as modernization, with television producers and state authorities using television programs to bolster modernization efforts. Contributors analyze the hallmarks of these media efforts: nation building, consumerism, and consumer culture, the education and integration of citizens, and the glorification of the nation's technological achievements.

American Communication Research Everette E. Dennis, Ellen Wartella, 1996. First Published in 1996. Routledge is an imprint of Taylor & Francis, an information company.

Television George Comstock, Erica Scharrer, 1999-04-15. Television: What's On, Who's Watching, and What It Means presents a comprehensive examination of the role of television in one's life. The emphasis is on data collected over the past two decades, pointing to an increasing and in some instances a surprising influence of the medium. Television is not only watched but its messages are attended to and well understood. There is no shame in spending hours in front of the set; in fact, people overestimate the time they spend viewing. Television advertising no longer persuades; it sells by creating a burst of emotional liking for the commercial. The emphases of television news determine not only what voters think about but also the presidential candidate they expect to support on election day. Children and teenagers who watch a great deal of television perform poorly on standardized achievement tests, and among the reasons are the usurpation of time spent learning to read and the discouragement of book reading. Television violence frightens some children and excites others, but its foremost effect is to increase aggressive behavior that sometimes spills over into seriously harmful antisocial behavior. Incorporates social psychology, political science, sociology, child development, and the growing field of communications. Presents tables and graphs clarifying theories and linking sets of data. Paints concise portraits of the role of television in entertainment, politics, and child rearing. Contains background for dozens of lectures and articles. Contains a comprehensive bibliography of more than 1000 citations, many recent.
