The Berlin Aging Study Paul B. Baltes, Karl Ulrich Mayer, 2001-03-19 The present and future of our society are shaped by an ever increasing proportion of old and very old people The Berlin Aging Study is one of the largest interdisciplinary efforts to explore old age and aging Unique aspects of the Berlin Aging Study are the spectrum of scientific disciplines involved the range of discipline specific and interdisciplinary research topics the focus on very old age 70 to over 100 years and the empirical reference to a representative heterogeneous urban population. The study's first cross-sectional findings on intellectual abilities, self and personality, social relationships, physical health, functional capacity, medical treatment, mental disorders such as depression and dementia, socioeconomic conditions, activities, everyday competence, subjective well-being, and gender differences are reported in depth in this book. The study was carried out in the context of the Berlin Brandenburg Academy of Sciences study group on Aging and Social Development. The authors primarily conduct their research at the Berlin Max Planck Institute for Human Development, the Free University of Berlin, and the Humboldt University Berlin.

Handbook of Social Work in Health and Aging Barbara Berkman, 2006-02-09. The Handbook of Social Work in Health and Aging is the first reference to combine the fields of health care, aging, and social work in a single authoritative volume. These areas are too often treated as discrete entities while the reality is that all social workers deal with issues in health and aging on a daily basis regardless of practice specialization. As the baby boomers age, the impact on practice in health and aging will be dramatic, and social workers need more specialized knowledge about aging, health care, and the resources available to best serve older adults and their families. The volume's 102 original chapters and 13 overviews, written by the most experienced and prominent gerontological health care scholars in the United States and across the world, provide social work practitioners and educators with up-to-date knowledge of evidence-based practice guidelines for effectively assessing and treating older adults and their families, new models for intervention in both community-based practice and institutional care, and knowledge of significant policy and research issues in health and aging. A truly monumental resource, this handbook represents the best research on health and aging available to social workers today.

Handbook of Gender, Culture, and Health Richard M. Eisler, Michel Hersen, 2012-10-02. This Handbook illustrates how gender, ethnicity, age, and even sexual orientation and understanding influence the health practices and risk factors for health problems in diverse groups of people. Contributions from leading researchers in psychology, health, and epidemiology provide an interdisciplinary approach to the topic. In addition to epidemiological issues, this book discusses the view that public health policy and programs must be individually tailored to specific groups to maximize their effectiveness. Part I deals with the effects of stress on the health of diverse populations. Part II of the book raises the issues of varied health risk factors and health practices for different cultural and socioeconomic groups. Part III examines specific health problems and issues common to women and men of varying ethnicity. The last section deals with the health problems of specific populations. Featuring the latest information for understanding how diverse groups of people perceive and respond to issues relating to their health, this Handbook should prove to be a valuable resource to a wide range of practitioners and researchers in psychology, medicine, psychiatry, sociology, social work, nursing, exercise science, and counseling.

Public Health and Aging Tom Hickey, Marjorie A. Speers, Thomas R. Prohaska, 1997-05-02
The role of public health in the planning, coordination, and delivery of health promotion and disease prevention services to older people living outside of institutional settings. Selected by Choice Magazine as an Outstanding Academic Title. Current issues in the public health arena have challenged the system to broaden its traditional focus on infectious disease to include chronic disease as well. As this change in emphasis takes place, professionals must be prepared to address the special chronic health concerns of older people living in the community. This textbook meets the training needs of those professionals. Public Health and Aging examines the role of public health in the planning, coordination, and delivery of health promotion and disease prevention services to older people living outside of institutional settings. Here, experts in the areas of health care policy and care of aged persons analyze the scientific basis for the practice of public health in an increasingly aging society. Reviewing a wide range of the social, cultural, financial, and environmental factors that influence the health experiences of older population groups, the authors delve into the epidemiology of age-related chronic illnesses, program development, methodological issues, data collection and analysis, strategies for intervention, and ethics. From outlines for community-based program planning and development to discussions about the future challenges for health care systems and services, this book is an ideal reference for gerontology, public policy, and public health professionals and professionals in training.

Feminist Perspectives on Family Care Nancy R. Hooyman, Judith Gonyea, 1995-08-29
Today, women find themselves playing an ever-increasing role in caring for older family members who are frail, developmentally disabled, or suffering from serious mental illness. While the role of women as caregivers has been documented, the actual impact on the lives of women has remained largely unstudied. In this volume, the authors examine caregiving as a central feminist issue, looking at its impact on women socially, personally, and economically. The authors review how changing family structures, the changing economy and workforce, and the changing health care demands of needy adults have impacted on women's lives. They critique existing public and private policies, demonstrating a need for fundamental structural changes in social institutions and attitudes to improve the lives of women. Finally, they propose a social model of care that is oriented toward gender justice, recognition of the work of caring, and its impact upon women socially personally and economically For students scholars and practitioners in the field of gerontology gender studies and social work this book is a must Innovations in Practice and Service Delivery Across the Lifespan David E. Biegel, Arthur Blum, 1999 This text will introduce practitioners and students to recent strategies and innovations to effectively deal with a range of problems across the lifespan such as homelessness alcohol and drug abuse teen violence and mental illness Health Promotion and Quality of Life in Canada Dennis Raphael, 2010-02-01 Health and quality of life are vital social reflections The way a society distributes resources amongst its population tells us a great deal about the society itself This unique volume unites readings that explore the integral link between quality of life and public policy choices The first section discusses individual perspectives on health promotion and quality of life and provides a conceptual basis for determining an individual's or community's standard The next section addresses community and policy perspectives to show how quality of life is related both to the health of the population as a whole and to collective choices that determine how material resources are distributed in society Part three places quality of life and population health within a political economy framework and uses the social determinants of health concept to illustrate how societies differ in their willingness to support their members quality of life and health Part four examines vulnerable populations and their issues the Indigenous community persons with disabilities women and the gender gap and the effects of race and immigrant status on employment opportunities The final section suggests ways in which health promotion quality of life and the social determinants of health agendas can come together It provides an up to date analysis of the barriers facing those attempting to improve quality of life and health as well as the means to accomplish those goals Last Years of Long Lives Tor Inge Romøren, 2004-03-01 The Last Years of Long Lives is a unique account of that period of old age which precedes death Based on 400 complete individual histories and covering a twenty year period it looks at the experiences of people over eighty years old in three important areas disability family life and health care Using the life course approach to research it reveals rich data about the contributions of formal and informal care and how life expectancy and experiences of disability interact with experiences of care The reader is invited to conceptualise these phenomena as processes in continuous time processes that are sometimes long and complex sometimes short and simple and learns about the four types of disability career before death At the same time the author presents a three stage model of informal care and examines the main patterns of formal service use The Last Years of Long Lives presents a new way of looking at old age for students researchers practitioners and policy makers and gives a comprehensive picture of what has been called the fourth age Race, Socioeconomic Status, and Family Structure Kathleen A.
