The Ex Situ Conservation of Plant Genetic Resources J.G. Hawkes,Nigel Maxted,B.V. Ford-Lloyd,2012-12-06 It is a distressing truism that the human race during the last millennium has caused the exponential loss of plant genetic diversity throughout the world This has had direct and negative economic political and social consequences for the human race which at the same time has failed to exploit fully the positive benefits that might result from conserving and exploiting the world s plant genetic resources However a strong movement to halt this loss of plant diversity and enhance its utilisation for the benefit of all humanity has been underway since the 1960 s Frankel and Bennett 1970 Frankel and Hawkes 1975 This initiative was taken up by the Convention on Biological Diversity CBD 1992 that not only expounds the need to conserve biological diversity but links conservation to exploitation and development for the benefit of all Article 8 of the Convention clearly states the need to develop more effective and efficient guidelines to conserve biological diversity while Article 9 along with the FAO International Undertaking on Plant Genetic Resources promotes the adoption of a complementary approach to conservation that incorporates both ex situ and in situ techniques

Wheat in a Global Environment Z. Bedo, L. Láng, 2013-06-29 Wheat breeders have achieved significant results over the last fifty years in research on mankind's one of the most important crops Classical genetic and breeding methods far broader international cooperation than was experienced in earlier periods and improvements in agronomic techniques have led to previously unimaginable development in the utilisation of wheat for human consumption The contribution of wheat researchers is particularly noteworthy since these results have been achieved at a time when the world population has grown extremely dynamically Despite this demographic explosion of a proportion never previously experienced thousands of millions of people have been saved from starvation thus avoiding unpredictable social consequences and situations irreconcilable with human dignity Despite these developments in many regions of the world food supplies are still uncertain and the increase in the world's wheat production has not kept pace with the population increase during the last decade Due to the evils of civilisation and the pollution of the environment there is a constant decline in the per capita area of land suitable for agricultural production Based on population estimates for 2030 the present wheat yield of around 600 million tonnes will have to be increased to almost 1000 million tonnes if food supplies are to be maintained at the present level Preserving Plant Genetic Resources for Food and Agriculture ,1998 Biodiversity Economics Andreas Kontoleon, Unai

Pascual, Timothy Swanson, 2007-12-13 Human induced biodiversity loss is greater now than at any time in human history with extinctions occurring at rates hundreds of times higher than background extinction levels The field of biodiversity economics analyses the socio economic causes of and solutions to biodiversity loss by combining the disciplines of economics ecology and biology This field has shown a remarkable degree of transformation over the past four decades and now incorporates the analysis of the entire diversity of biological resources within the living world Biodiversity Economics presents a series of papers that show how bio economic analysis can be applied to the examination and evaluation of the problem of various forms of biodiversity loss Containing insightful bio economic research by some of prominent practitioners in the field this volume will be an essential research tool to those working on biodiversity issues in the academic policy and private sectors
