Air pollution is known to be a risk factor for personal health and an important determinant of various diseases Numerous studies exist that examine the effects of an increase in air pollution on the risk of disease and mortality from cardiovascular and cardiopulmonary causes One possible way to quantify air pollution is to measure the concentration of particles with a specific diameter between 2.5 and 10 micrometers are referred to as PM10 The authors assess the effects of air pollutants PM10 on hospital admissions for respiratory diseases in Egypt in 2016 They use a retrospective design and employ a generalized additive model GAM to conduct our analysis Daily hospital admission data for Chronic Obstructive Pulmonary Disease COPD and chronic bronchitis were collected from specialized chest hospitals and matched to air pollution data The results suggest that the concentration of PM10 in the air is an important predictor of respiratory disease The authors find that a 10 ug

Project Report from the year 2024 in the subject Health Public Health grade 1 2 course Biostatistics language English abstract This research investigates the intricate relationship between air pollution and respiratory health by integrating real time air quality data with longitudinal health records Using sophisticated statistical techniques including multivariate regression and machine learning algorithms we analyze the impact of key pollutants such as PM2.5 PM10 NOx and SO2 on the prevalence and severity of respiratory conditions Our study not only identifies significant pollutant health associations but also introduces a novel predictive model that assesses individual risk based on dynamic air quality metrics and personal health data The model s predictive accuracy offers a proactive tool for public health interventions allowing for targeted health advisories and personalized prevention strategies The findings enhance our understanding of air pollution s multifaceted effects on respiratory health providing crucial evidence to guide effective policy measures and improve health outcomes in affected populations Air Pollution and Lung Disease in Adults Philip Witorsch, Samuel V.
