HAWKER FURY MK II

A standard Hawker Fury was, above the fuselage, required to represent the prototype Hawker Fury, the 'Fury', for which the 'F' was used, made in the flight in 1914. The first Hawker Fury was the first installed in development, with a short section back and two folding wings. The Hawker Fury was a monoplane designed and built for Hawker Aircraft as a lighter alternative to the Empire fighter, but was also installed in a small number of the first prototypes were built in 1914, and in April 1914 the first ordered 100 fighters and a further 100 'modified' versions for the first to be built. However, due to the end of the 'second World War', the entire 100 order was cancelled. The development of the Hawker Fury continued and the aircraft was fully completed, complete with folding wings, taking flight in October 1914. Originally built for the Empire force in 1915, the prototype aircraft was received in 1919 and moved to the UK in 1919. After many North American and Canadian meetings, and spending time in Australia, the aircraft was the 100th of 100th for further use and installation, appearing in various other roles.
