Johnson, Michael J. Mappin, 2005-03-03 Environmental education has often blurred the distinction between ecological science and environmental advocacy. Growing public awareness of environmental problems and desire for action may be contributing to this blurring. There is a need to clarify the distinction between the role of ecological science and the role of social and political values for the environment within environmental education. This book addresses this need by examining the changing perspectives of ecology in education and the changing perspectives of education in environmental education. Guidelines are provided for assessing the science and education perspectives within environmental education along with suggested frameworks for development of programs and resources that integrate current science education and action. This book will be of interest to environmental educators, ecologists interested in environmental education and curriculum and resource developers. Forest Community Connections Ellen Donoghue, Victoria Sturtevant, 2010-09-30

The connections between communities and forests are complex and evolving, presenting challenges to forest managers, researchers, and communities themselves. Dependency on timber extraction and timber-related industries is no longer a universal characteristic of the forest community. Remoteness is also a less common feature as technology, workforce mobility, tourism, and amenity migrants increasingly connect rural to urban places. Forest Community Connections explores the responses of forest communities to a changing economy, changing federal policy, and concerns about forest health from both within and outside forest communities. Focusing primarily on the United States, the book examines the ways that social scientists work with communities, their role in facilitating social learning, informing policy decisions, and contributing to community well-being. Bringing perspectives from sociology, anthropology, political science, and forestry, the authors review a range of management issues including wildfire risk, forest restoration, labor force capacity, and the growing demand for a growing variety of forest goods and services. They examine the increasingly diverse aesthetic and cultural values that forest residents attribute to forests, the factors that contribute to strong and resilient connections between communities and forests, and consider a range of governance structures to positively influence the well-being of forest communities and forests, including collaboration and community-based forestry. The Human Capacity for Transformational Change Valerie A. Brown, John A. Harris, 2014-02-24 Pressures for transformational change have become a regular feature of most fields of human endeavour Master thinkers and visionaries alike have reframed existing divisions as connecting relationships bringing together as dynamic systems the supposed opposites of parts and wholes stability and change individuals and society and rational and creative thinking This reframing of opposites as interconnected wholes has led to realisation of the power of a collective mind This book offers ways and means of creating the synergies that are crucial in influencing a desired transformational change towards a just and sustainable future It describes how and why our current decision making on any complex issue is marked by clashes between the different interests involved More optimistically the book pursues a mode of thinking that brings together government specialised and community interests at the local regional and personal scales in a collective transformation process Practical examples signal the emergence of a new knowledge tradition that promises to be as powerful as the scientific enlightenment Written in accessible language this book will be insightful reading for anyone struggling with transformational change especially researchers students and professionals in the fields of administration governance environmental management international development politics public health public law sociology and community development the friction between the two The designer of a Web portal for example might take on the problem of security by focusing on the limits of permeability Design is edgy and risky argues Coyne in the same way that breaches in network security are risky In Cornucopia Limited he examines the threshold between conditions exemplified by the boundary between design and commerce Coyne uses five metaphors of design to develop his argument the household in economics historically opposed to the market with its relationship to the street mediated by various portals the machine rampant and glitchy the game competitive but simulated the gift precursor to commerce and the threshold The threshold condition Coyne says is the site of edgy design and a portal into the new The threshold he argues provides the most potent metaphor for understanding the liminal dwellers of the network economy Interpretation in Architecture Adrian Snodgrass, Richard Coyne, 2013-05-13
