Abstract: This paper examines the impact of agricultural liberalization on the welfare of farmers and consumers in developing countries. It argues that the impact of liberalization is not uniform and depends on the degree of market integration and the structure of the agricultural sector. In particular, it shows that liberalization can lead to a concentration of benefits among a small group of farmers and a corresponding loss of benefits for the rest of the sector. This is especially true in the case of developing countries where the agricultural sector is often characterized by a high degree of heterogeneity and a low degree of market integration. The paper also discusses the role of government in mitigating the negative impacts of liberalization and the need for a more comprehensive approach to agricultural reform.

Agricultural Markets Beyond Liberalization:

Agricultural Markets Beyond Liberalization Aad van Tilburg, Henk A.J. Moll, A. Kuyvenhoven, 2012-12-06 Agricultural markets have entered a long term process of liberalization with the aim of reducing imposed market imperfections such as monopolistic public trade entry barriers and subsidies The experience of more than a decade of agriculture liberalization offers a good opportunity to review and analyze the outcome of this process and to draw lessons for the future The central topic in Agricultural Markets Beyond Liberalization is the relationship between market structure and how markets perform in a dynamic context during a liberalization process The topic is studied from both a micro and macro viewpoint and refers to different types of agricultural markets This volume brings together the dynamics of agricultural markets in several parts of the world with a special focus on transition economics and Africa The different studies cover geographical areas as wide as a district as well as a group of countries and institutions from individual contracts to multi national organizations The analysis of liberalization under different circumstances and the different methods of analysis used by the authors provide a valuable foundation for the assessment of liberalization

Agricultural Markets Beyond Liberalization A. Kuyvenhoven, H. A. J. Moll, A. van Tilburg, 1998* The Development Dimension Trade, Agriculture and Development Policies Working Together OECD, 2006-04-18 These conference proceedings explore why policy coherence is important how it affects global agricultural trade and whether it can help reduce poverty and hunger

Development economics between markets and institutions Erwin Bulte, Ruerd Ruben, 2023-08-28 This volume in the Mansholt series presents state of the art discussions on a wide variety of topics in the field of agricultural development More than 20 chapters have been prepared by internationally known scholars and policy analysts providing a concise overview of a variety of recent debates in development economics While the background of most contributors is in economic science the chapters are prepared so that they feed into ongoing policy discussions and are accessible to a wide readership The contributions in this volume are organized around five themes prospects for rural poverty alleviation sustainable management of natural resources strategies for enhancing food security markets and the role of the state and institutions and governance It is obvious there are many links between these themes and indeed the integration between them is emphasized in various chapters This book is prepared as a festschrift or Liber Amicorum for professor Arie Kuyvenhoven His retirement from the Development Economics Group at Wageningen University The Netherlands is a good opportunity to take stock of recent developments in the area of agricultural development economics Therefore in addition to being a valuable source of information for readers with an interest in development this volume is also intended as a farewell gift to Arie from friends and colleagues

Unlocking markets to smallholders Herman D. van Schalkwyk, Jan A. Groenewald, Gavin C.G. Fraser, Ajuruchukwu Obi, Aad van Tilburg, 2012-03-10 This book assesses the institutional technical and market constraints as well as opportunities for smallholders notably emerging farmers in disadvantaged areas such as the former homelands of South Africa Emerging farmers are previously disadvantaged black people who started or will start their business with the support of special government programs Public support programs have been developed as part of the Black Economic Empowerment strategy of the South African government These programs aim to improve the performance of emerging farmers This requires first and foremost upgrading the emerging farmers skills by providing access to knowledge about agricultural and entrepreneurial practices To become or to remain good farmers they also need access to suitable agricultural land and sufficient water for irrigation and for feeding their cattle Finally for emerging farmers to be engaged in viable farming operations various factors need to be in place such as marketing and service institutions to give credit for agricultural inputs and investments input markets for farm machinery farm implements fertilizers and quality seeds and accessible output markets for their end products This book develops a policy framework and potential institutional responses to unlock the relevant markets for smallholders

Vertical Markets and Cooperative Hierarchies comprises a selection of sixteen newly written essays that provide clarification to issues pertinent to contemporary cooperatives Twenty three internationally recognized scholars of agricultural cooperatives from a variety of disciplines such as industrial organization finance sociology networks and political theory contributed theoretical work and empirical observations from different countries The book is divided into five Parts I Cooperatives between markets and hierarchies II Governance III Internal organizational issues IV Conduct of cooperatives and V Cooperative performance Markets, marketing and developing countries Hans van Trijp, Paul Ingenbleek, 2023-09-04

Markets are increasingly seen as vehicles to solve problems in developing countries For example improvements in market performance make potentially important contributions to achieve the Millennium Development Goals Access of smallholders to well functioning markets is increasingly expected to contribute to poverty alleviation and improvement of both food security and environmental sustainability This book presents the views of leading experts on where we stand and where we are heading in the field of markets marketing and developing countries Twenty essays in this book describe the role of marketing in achieving development goals the track record of past market policies the current functioning of value chains the roles that market institutions play to facilitate market access for smallholders as well as the potential to add value to farm produce through certification schemes new technologies or innovation systems The book is published in honour of the retirement of Aad van Tilburg one of the pioneers in the field of marketing in developing countries Early on in his career Van Tilburg recognised that improvements in the functioning of markets and marketing can be key to economic development with special reference to the livelihood of small producers and other market actors in developing countries Agriculture for improved nutrition: Seizing the momentum Fan, Shenggen, Yosef, Sivan, Pandya-Lorch, Rajul, 2019-02-28 Agriculture's vast potential to improve nutrition is just beginning to be tapped New ideas research and initiatives developed over the past decade have created an opportunity for reimagining and redesigning agricultural and food systems for the benefit of nutrition To support this transformation the book reviews the latest findings results from on the ground programs and interventions and recent policy experiences from countries around the world that are bringing the agriculture and nutrition sectors closer together Drawing on IFPRI's own work and that of the growing agriculture nutrition community this book strengthens the evidence base for and expands our vision of how agriculture can contribute to nutrition Chapters cover an array of issues that link agriculture and nutrition including food value chains nutrition sensitive programs and policies government policies and private sector investments By highlighting both achievements and setbacks Agriculture for Improved Nutrition seeks to inspire those who want to scale up successes that can transform food systems and improve the nutrition of billions of people Livelihood diversification of farming households in northwest Sierra Leone. Tilburg, A. van., 2001 Assessing the Comparative Advantage of Wheat Produced in Albania Luce Agraja, 2006 The

Cooperative Enterprise Gert van Dijk, Panagiota Sergaki, George Baourakis, 2019-04-06 This book presents a study of cooperatives as a two layer entrepreneurial model and analyzes cooperative enterprises Above all it explores how inducements from the firm and contributions from its members in their respective roles are aligned and seeks to answer the question of what this means for managing each cooperative as a firm as well as a group The book is divided into three parts the first of which begins with an analysis of specific aspects of cooperative enterprises with a focus on the added value of cooperation the weighing of interests and a behavioral perspective on the imminent communities and their goals In a structured approach the book examines the various facets of relationships in cooperatives on a transactional financial and control level Further a case study on the Dutch cooperative Rabobank illustrates what happens when members fail In turn part two concentrates on integrating the lessons learned with the existing economic literature on cooperatives so as to contribute to a theory of cooperative management Finally the book links the theoretical approach to practice in the third part it reports on the outcomes of using a computerized simulation game to show members of cooperatives how to manage their business and the cooperative business at the same time enabling them to understand and actively practice two level entrepreneurship

Beyond Market Liberalization Bart Minten, Manfred Zeller, 2017-11-01 This title was first published in 2000 Most African countries experienced dramatic agricultural market reforms over the 1990s This has resulted in significant changes in the operation of the agricultural markets and consequently in income generation and welfare of rural households In the case of Madagascar the results suggest that market reforms and corresponding adjustments in rural markets have had an average positive effect on food security for the rural households However richer households seemed to have benefited more than the poorer households This text provides a study of the market reforms focusing particularly in the changes brought to welfare income and environmental sustainability in rural areas The study aims to be of particular interest to economists and those involved in development and environmental issues

Global Challenges in Responsible Business N. Craig Smith, C. B. Bhattacharya, David Vogel, David I. Levine, 2010-07-29 Corporate responsibility has gone global It has secured the attention of business leaders governments and NGOs to an unprecedented extent Increasingly it is argued that business must play a constructive role in addressing massive global challenges Business is not responsible for causing most of the problems associated with for example extreme poverty and hunger child mortality and HIV AIDS However it is often claimed that business has a responsibility to help ameliorate many of these problems and indeed it may be the only institution capable of effectively addressing some of them Global Challenges in Responsible Business addresses the implications for business of corporate responsibility in the context of globalization and the social and environmental problems we face today Featuring research from Europe North America Asia and Africa it focuses on three major themes embedding corporate responsibility corporate responsibility and marketing and corporate responsibility in developing countries

international Nile perch fish chain should or can be organised to improve both welfare of local communities sustainability of the fisheries and quality of the fish Primary producers face a number of bottlenecks such as poor access to production facilities ineffective enforcement of sustainable practices lack of market price information competition with international markets and degradation of the fisheries that lead to increasing food insecurity problems In order to improve sustainability and quality primary producers are open to contracts that enable them better access to production facilities and price information and also to better integrate them into international channels Sustainable practices can or should be part of these contracts Although the downstream channel members and other stakeholders were not fully aware of the complexity and gravity of the upstream problems they appeared to be willing to help to improve the situation at Lake Victoria It is therefore a corporate social responsibility for the downstream channel members as well as nature conservation organizations and the donor community to empower the primary producers and local communities in developing countries to implement welfare sustainability and quality enhancing practices This publication outlines several mechanisms to achieves these goals

Economic Policy and Sustainable Land Use Nico Heerink,Herman van Keulen,Marijke Kuiper,2012-12-06 Since the 1980s many developing countries have implemented macro economic policy reforms to curb inflation reduce fiscal deficits and control foreign debt The policy instruments used such as exchange rate adjustment budget cuts trade policy reforms public expenditure reviews and privatisation have different and sometimes opposite consequences for agricultural land use During the same period awareness was growing that deteriorating soil quality could become a limiting factor to increase or even sustain agricultural production As a result food availability and even accessibility for large population groups in developing countries may be jeopardised in the near future Recently quantitative models have made useful contributions to understanding the impact of economic policy reforms on the sustainability of land use They provide a consistent analytical framework to deal with complex issues such as the direct and indirect effects of economic agricultural environmental and population policies the role of market imperfections in transmitting economic policy signals and the interactions between soil quality agricultural production and household economic decision making Different types of models can be distinguished bio economic models focussing on the link between farm household decisions and the agricultural resource base household and village models examining the impact of the socio economic environment on farm household decisions and more aggregate models analysing interactions between sectors and their implications for sustainable land use West African Studies
