Issues in the Efficient Use of Surface and Groundwater in Irrigation Gerald T. O'Mara, 1984 The efficient use of water resources where both ground and surface water are used may require special policies to rationalize the interaction among pumping by farmers canal diversions by irrigation system managers and the physical response of the stream aquifer system Significant gains in output are possible from more efficient conjunctive use However these potential gains are not costless because their realization requires changes in irrigation institutions methods of irrigation management and often accompanying investments in drainage facilities Three broad approaches to the problem have been defined i assignment of well defined transferrable legal property rights ii imposition of corrective taxes or subsidies and iii centralized control over the entire resource The feasibility and institutional implications of these approaches are discussed and several case histories of actual policy responses to the social costs incurred by conjunctive use are reviewed The prognosis is hopeful but better information systems more skilled managers and institutional reforms are needed

Priorities in Education Moshe Smilansky, Roger Grawe, Theodore J. Goering, 1979

Fuelwood Consumption and Deforestation in African Countries Dennis Anderson, Robert Fishwick, 1984

Women in the Urban Labor Markets of Africa Nwanganga Shields, Raj Krishna, Ruhul Amin, 1980 Report seeks to explain the disparity in employment opportunities between men and women in Africa by focusing on urban Tanzanian women

User Charges for Education Jee-Peng Tan, Kiong Hock Lee, Alain Mingat, 1984 Investment in education is generally recognized as essential for a country's long term economic and social development However present macroeconomic conditions have limited allocation of public resources for education Policymakers are seeking alternative sources of finance one of which is the tapping of private household resources via user charges This paper addresses two main issues involved in mobilizing resources by this method i the ability and willingness of families to pay and ii the possible expansion of enrollment that might be accomplished given public budget constraints The data on Malawi suggest the following i a moderate fee increase is unlikely to precipitate a large dropout rate among students ii excess demand will more than compensate for those students who do drop out due to the fee increase and iii since fee increases will have a stronger impact on lower income families they should be linked with equity measures such as scholarships

Issues of Efficiency and Interdependence in Water Resource Investments John H. Duloy, Gerald T. O'Mara, 1984 This paper reports the results from some experiments utilizing models of the irrigated agriculture of the Indus Basin of Pakistan The models are unique in that they integrate agricultural production with a surface water distribution system and a groundwater aquifer system for a large river basin Each of the models incorporates a special case of two level hierarchical decision making with the policy maker the government and policy receivers farmers in the analysis of agricultural production response The models are mostly configured in a long run comparative statistical mode and include endogenous private investment in tubewells and tractors These tools were designed for evaluation of investment projects and programs and assessment of irrigation system management but have been adapted for other purposes as well
