South Pacific Air War Volume 5 Michael Claringbould,Peter Ingman,2021-12 Volume Five of this series chronicles aerial warfare primarily in the New Guinea theater in the critical period between September and December 1942 It can be read alone or as a continuation of the previous four volumes which span the first nine months of the Pacific War By early September the strategic picture in the theater had changed markedly within just six weeks From their new Buna beachhead the Japanese Army commenced a Papuan mountain campaign which threatened the Allied bastion of Port Moresby Meanwhile the battle for Guadalcanal was raging with the outcome of the wider Pacific War in the balance Against this background a strengthened US Fifth Air Force took the fight to the IJA with direct air support While this was being conducted by P 39s P 40Es A 20As and B 25s raids by B 17s against Rabaul aided US forces in the neighboring Solomons RAAF Beaufighters Beauforts Bostons and Hudsons also contributed substantially to these efforts At Rabaul a wide variety of fresh IJN fighter and bomber units poured in the theater although these became focused mainly on the Solomons Such were the massive losses experienced by November the IJN undertook a complete operational and administrative reorganization of its air power Then despite a strong reluctance to become involved the IJA sent an advance reconnaissance detachment to Rabaul the forerunner of major reinforcements that would arrive in December Never before has this campaign been chronicled in such detail with Allied and Japanese accounts matched together for a truly factual account of the conflict

Zero Masatake Okumiya, Jiro Horikoshi, 2004-03-01 This is the thrilling saga of war in the air in the Pacific Theater of Operations during World War II told from the Japanese point of view It is the story of the men who created and fought in the deadly Zero fighter plane In their own words Jiro Horikoshi who designed the Zero Masatake Okumiya leader of many Zero squadrons and Saburo Sakai Japan's leading surviving fighter ace as well as many other men tell the inside story of developing the Zero and Japan's air force

South Pacific Air War Volume 3 Michael John Claringbould, Peter Ingman, 2019-08 This third volume chronicles aerial warfare in the South Pacific during the critical months of May and June 1942 It can be read alone or as part of a trilogy that spans the first six months of the Pacific War and culminates in the Battle of the Coral Sea In early May 1942 the Japanese launched Operation MO a complex plan that involved the seizure of Tulagi and Port Moresby Within the context of an ongoing regional war waged by land based air forces opposing fleet carriers were drawn into conflict for the first time in history The result was the Battle of the Coral Sea resulting in the loss of the USS Lexington and the withdrawal of the remaining American carrier The orthodox view of Coral Sea is of an Allied victory whereby the Japanese were forced to abandon their plan to capture Port Moresby However the authors make a compelling argument that the Japanese capacity to mount the invasion was largely intact and it was a serious error by their rigid and hierarchical command structure to postpone the invasion at this critical time Following the Coral Sea battle the bloody aerial campaign continued in earnest between the land based air forces This resembled something of a slugfest between the opposing bases of Lae and Port Moresby just one hour s flying time apart The Allied offense was waged by American B 17 Flying Fortress B 25 Mitchell and B 26 Marauder bombers shuttling up from Australia Protecting their critical base at Port Moresby were a few hard battling P 39 Airacobra squadrons which suffered an astounding loss rate during this period On the Japanese side their formations of Betty and Nell bombers regularly pounded Moresby and by June had begun targeting its vulnerable harbor These were protected by the wide ranging Zero fighters of the famed Tainan Kokutai whose fighter pilots were amongst the best and most experienced to be found on any front during the Second World War Never before has this campaign been chronicled in such detail with Allied accounts matched against Japanese records and supported by the most accurate artwork ever produced of this era Both authors are uniquely qualified to tell this story Raised in Port Moresby Michael Claringbould is a globally acknowledged expert on the New Guinea conflict and both Japanese and USAAF aviation of this period Peter Ingman is an acclaimed military history author specializing in the early part of the Pacific War
