Executive Defense Michael Useem, 1993 A quiet revolution came to corporate America during the late 1980s and early 1990s Large shareholders pension funds insurance companies money managers and commercial banks exercised new found muscle pressuring senior managers to improve disappointing financial results by reshaping their organizations Michael Useem reveals how those investor pressures have transformed the inside structures of many corporations better aligning them with shareholder interests Useem draws on numerous sources including interviews with senior managers and intensive studies of seven large corporations representing a range of restructuring experiences and industries including pharmaceuticals transportation chemicals retailing and financial services He shows that organizational changes have affected many areas of corporate life headquarters staffs have been reduced authority has filtered down to operating units and compensation has become more closely tied to performance Change also extends to corporate governance where managers have fought back by seeking legal safeguards against takeovers and by staggering board terms They've also put significant resources into building more effective relations with shareholders As Useem demonstrates this revolution has reached beyond the corporation influencing American politics and law As increasing ownership concentration has caused companies to focus more attention on shareholders corporate political agendas have shifted from fighting government regulation to resisting shareholder intrusion This book will be important reading for managers economists lawyers financial analysts and all observers of American business

Why Companies Do Not Pursue Attractive Mergers and Acquisitions Richard B. Connell, 2008 There are substantial bodies of literature that advance theory about why merger and acquisition candidates are found to be unattractive why negotiations are not concluded and why the benefits of companies that are acquired are not realised Little if any research identifies why merger and acquisition opportunities are not pursued in the period after candidates are analysed and found to be attractive but before negotiations begin This study addresses this period by developing a theoretical framework of the variables that intervene to reverse decisions to pursue apparently attractive candidates before negotiations begin and which in doing so result in missed opportunities The study is informed primarily by the strategic management content literature but draws from the strategy process literature including streams in strategic decision making SDM and behavioural decision theory BDT This is a critical book for business scholars that provides an important perspective that has not yet been studied
