Creating Carleton H. Blair Neatby, Don McEown, 2002-10-01 They analyse how Carleton University tried to adjust to the changing social values of the 1960s describing how the administration tried to come to terms with financial constraint the professors tried to shift their emphasis from teaching to research while fretting about job security and the students challenged the traditional authority of university officials and professors in an effort to become fee paying clients rather than pupils Over and above these changes were attempts to come to grips with individual rights and the changing status of women Creating Carleton is not only the story of how Carleton came to terms with these changes but a case study of the transformation of higher education in Ontario and in

Best Laid Plans Jessica Halliday Hardie, 2022-09-13 Given the range of possibilities open to women today what futures do adolescent girls dream of and pursue And how do social class and race play into their trajectories In asking young women about their aspirations in three areas school work and family Best Laid Plans demonstrates how future plans are framed by notions of gendered responsibilities and abilities Through her examination of the lives of poor working class and middle class Black and White young women as they navigate the transition to adulthood sociologist Jessica Halliday Hardie defines anew what it means for young women to come of age In particular Hardie shows how social capital either possessed or lacked is not simply a resource for planning for the future but a structure whose form and function varies by social class and race As these inequalities persist into adulthood high aspirations social capital and careful planning bolster some young women while hindering others Drawing on qualitative data from a five year period Best Laid Plans makes the case for why we need to move beyond the individual appeal to dream bigger and plan better and toward systematic changes that will put young people's aspirations within reach

Making College Work Harry J. Holzer, Sandy Baum, 2017-08-15 Practical solutions for improving higher education opportunities for disadvantaged students Too many disadvantaged college students in America do not complete their coursework or receive any college credential while others earn degrees or certificates with little labor market value Large numbers of these students also struggle to pay for college and some incur debts that they have difficulty repaying The authors provide a new review of the causes of these problems and offer promising policy solutions The circumstances affecting disadvantaged students stem both from issues on the individual side such as weak academic preparation and financial pressures and from institutional failures Low income students disproportionately attend schools that are underfunded and have weak performance incentives contributing to unsatisfactory outcomes for many students Some solutions including better financial aid or academic supports target individual students Other solutions such as stronger linkages between coursework and the labor market and more structured paths through the curriculum are aimed at institutional reforms All students and particularly those from disadvantaged backgrounds also need better and varied pathways both to college and directly to the job market beginning in high school We can improve college outcomes but must also acknowledge that we must make hard choices and face difficult tradeoffs in the process While no single policy is guaranteed to greatly improve college and career outcomes implementing a number of evidence based policies and programs together has the potential to improve these outcomes substantially
