Books and Bidders: The Adventures of a Bibliophile Abraham Simon Wolf Rosenbach, Genius The tall old man with the fan shaped beard looked eagerly at his companion then settled back more heavily against the rows and rows of old books lining the walls to the ceiling on all sides of the room Of course Edgar was a genius but in spite of being a gambler and a drunkard in spite of it I tell you The other a thin man of lesser years his long inquiring face meditative in the twilight nodded You are right he agreed But what difference did it make The only question is would The Raven have been any greater without his gambling and drinking I doubt it The argument was on and my uncle Moses Pollock would lean forward now and again waving his coatless arms he handled books easier in shirt sleeves in an effort to gain a point His peculiarly young and penetrating blue eyes glistened Opposite George P Philes a noted editor and book collector twirled a gray moustache and goatee while balancing in a tilted chair listening calmly and patiently relighting a half smoked cigar which went out often as the verbal heat increased I would watch these two dazed with their heated words concerning authors and their works hear them make bookish prophecies most of which came true A favorite subject was their neurotic friend Edgar Allan Poe Both had befriended this singularly unfortunate and great writer and each had certain contentions to make which led through the fire of argument to the cooler and more even discussion of reminiscences But they did agree that it would take less than fifty years after Poe's death to make first editions of his works the most valuable of all American authors It was in 1885 when I was nine years old that I first felt the haunting atmosphere of Uncle Moses bookshop on the second floor of the bulging red brick building on Commerce Street in old Philadelphia At that age I could hardly realize spellbound as I was the full quality of mystery and intangible beauty which becomes a part of the atmosphere wherever fine books are brought together for here was something which called to me each afternoon just as the wharves the water and the ships drew other boys who were delighted to get away from books the moment school was out Whatever it was some glibly speak of it as bibliomania it entered my bones then and has grown out of all proportion ever since The long walk from the bookshop to my home in the twilight the moon just coming up throwing long shadows across the white slab of Franklin's grave which I had to pass was sometimes difficult but as I grew older I learned to shut my eyes against imaginary fears and in a valiant effort to be brave hurried past darkened corners and abysmal alleyways inventing a game by which I tried to visualize the only touches of color in Uncle Moses musty dusty shop occasional brilliantly bound volumes Running along I also cross examined myself on quotations and dates from books and manuscripts through which I had prowled earlier in the day unwittingly developing a memory which was often to stand me in good stead

Bibliophily University of London. Department of Extra-Mural Studies,1986 Incunabula in Transit Lotte Hellinga,2018-02-12 Almost half a million books printed in the fifteenth century survive in collections worldwide In Incunabula in Transit Lotte Hellinga explores how and where they were first disseminated Propelled by the novel need to market hundreds of books early printers formed networks with colleagues engaged agents and traded Latin books over long distances They adapted presentation to suit the taste of distinct readerships local and remote Publishing in vernacular languages required typographical innovations as the chapter on William Caxton's Flanders enterprise demonstrates Eighteenth century collectors dislodged books from institutions where they had rested since the sales drives of early printers Erudite and entertaining Hellinga's evidence based approach linked to historical context deepens understanding of the trade in early printed books

Early Printed Books as Material Objects Bettina Wagner,Marcia Reed,2010-12-23 The papers collected in this volume discuss descriptive methods and present conclusions relevant for the history of the book production and reception Books printed in Europe in the 15th and 16th century still had much in common with manuscripts They are not mere textual sources but also material objects whose physical make up and individual features need to be taken into account in library projects for cataloguing and digitization

A Catalogue of Books Printed in the Fifteenth Century Now in the Bodleian Library Bodleian Library, Alan Coates, 2005 The Bodleian's incunabula catalogue describes the Library's fifteenth century western printed books to the same standards expected in the best modern catalogues of medieval manuscripts It records and identifies all texts contained in each volume and the detailed analysis of the textual content is an innovative feature Further information about authors editors translators and dedicatees is given in an extensive index of names complete with biographical and other information this index will be of interest to textual scholars from the classical period to the renaissance The detailed descriptions of the copy specific features of each book the binding hand decoration and hand finishing marginalia and provenance form another important contribution to scholarship The provenance index will be of great value to all those interested in the history of the book from the 1450s to the present day

Texts in Transit Lotte Hellinga, 2014-08-12 After Gutenberg's Bible had appeared in print in 1455 other early printers found different ways to solve problems set by the new technique Survival of printer's copy or proofs permits rare views of compositors and printers manipulating a text before it emerged in its new form Versions were corrected to be fit for purpose and might be adapted for a much enlarged readership especially if the language was vernacular The printing press itself required careful measuring and fitting of texts In twelve case studies Lotte Hellinga explores what is revealed in printer's copy and proofs used in diverse printing houses covering the period from 1459 to the 1490s and ranging from Rome and Venice to Mainz and Westminster See also the companion volume by the same author Incunabula in Transit Brill 2017
