Blain,2001 This dissertation reports the results of a sociological analysis of the narrative form and functions of revolutionary discourse Chapter I poses two questions How do representations of death function in political processes How do signifiers of violent death function in the structure of revolutionary statements Chapter II reviews relevant sociological concepts and articulates a dramatic political sociology of death concepts mainly derived from Emile Durkheim Robert Hertz and Arnold van Gennep on death and the sacred Max Weber on violence and politics and Burke Duncan and Edelman s view of politics as symbolic action Chapter III presents the results of a formal narrative and semiotic analysis of a large sample of revolutionary statements Saussure

Levi Strauss Foucault Two symbolic complexes were clearly evident First revolutionaries employ a tragic narrative form employing the blood of innocent victims and heroic martyrs to construct the villainy of their enemies to provoke moral outrage and to legitimate acts of righteous retaliation against established authority Second metaphors of fire storm explosion and eruption are used to infuse revolutionary acts with powerful impersonal forces Chapter IV validates these results through an exploratory study of political meanings employing Osgood s semantic differential technique Chapter V concludes that in revolutionary discourse at least revolutionary action is a form of tragic drama an violent appeal to a public audience made on behalf of powerless people a statement that one is willing to kill and die in the name of the ultimate principles of social order The results of the semantic differential analysis show that these meanings can be studied empirically employing this technique They also illustrate the validity and usefulness of the analytic framework suggesting future avenues of research

Blood on the Plains Thomas Albert Curry,1949 Bonds of Blood? Ekaterina Sokirianskaia,2023-03-09 The North Caucasus specifically Chechnya and Ingushetia is a region that has experienced some of the deadliest and most protracted conflicts in Europe Chechnya is currently a totalitarian enclave within the increasingly authoritarian Russian Federation while Ingushetia still suffers from lingering political conflicts and chronic problems with the quality of governance. By examining the relationship between state and society, this book considers how state building has unfolded in a region with highly complex social structures, a history of colonialism, Soviet authoritarianism, and later post-Soviet wars and trauma. Focusing on a systematic analysis of subnational state building in post-Soviet Chechnya and Ingushetia and the role of teips/clans in this process, this study responds to the widely accepted academic claim that governance and ethnic consolidation in the North Caucasus are shaped by the politics of teips and the belief that late and uneven modernization and the survival of tribal structures have been accountable for systematic failures in state building in the region. The research is based on over 200 interviews which the author carried out in Ingushetia and Chechnya as well as interviews with Chechen exiled politicians in Europe. The book also features never before seen access to the archives of the Chechen Parliament during the period of de facto independence. Through research into the socio-anthropological analysis of the clans and how they function towards political systems, Sokirianskaia shows how the teips lost their traditional organizational structure and roles, becoming incapable of mobilizing for political action. She argues that while teip symbolism has remained politically relevant and the bonds of kinship are highly important, they do not form the basis of politics and subnational state building in Chechnya and Ingushetia. Consequently, subnational authoritarianism is not the result of the pre-existing social composition of the society but a reflection of institutional rules imposed by Moscow.
