Decision And Stress:

Decision and Stress Donald Eric Broadbent, 1971 Components of the scene Vigilance results with traditional measures Vigilance the approach with measures from decision theory Some necessary preliminaries on the nature of the auditory system Selective perception Reaction to stimuli occurring with different probabilities The speed of decisions Primary memory Noise and other stresses Speculations and plans      How Stress and Anxiety Impact Your Decision Making Steven Howard, 2020-06-13 It's not just WHAT you think but HOW you think that makes a difference in the outcomes you generate You make tens of thousands of decisions a day up to 70 000 according to research Yet far too many of these decisions are made under emotional duress stress anxiety and pressure When this happens the rational control center of your brain is no longer in charge having been replaced by the emotional control center Make Better Decisions You do not have to emotionally react to events situations and people Within this book you will find useful and easy to implement tips and techniques for taking control of your emotions and thoughts so that you can respond instead of reacting to life's daily challenges Doing so puts you in a position to make more optimal decisions both personally and professionally Drive Better Outcomes Stressed out people fall prey to binary choice decision making which limits the options they take into consideration An array of choices and options appear in mindful moments because opting to pause prevents habitual knee jerk responses from automatically surfacing and taking over Removing yourself from autopilot mode helps prevent reactive decisions and responses A mindfulness breather enables your conscious thoughts to hold sway over unconscious instinctive and automatic reactions This leads to better decisions and more desirable outcomes Better decision making and better thinking and thus better outcomes can be yours The key to doing so especially for important decisions that lead to a more productive and happier life is in knowing how stress and anxiety impact your decision making      Decision and stress Donald E. Broadbent, 1971

Making Decisions Under Stress Janis A. Cannon-Bowers, Eduardo Salas, 1998 Ten years ago a fateful intersection of technology risk and split second decisions claimed 290 lives when the USS VICENNES mistakenly shot down a commercial airliner over the Persian Gulf In the aftermath of this tragedy a revolutionary applied research programme known as TADMUS Tactical Decision Making Under Stress was launched The TADMUS programme was devoted to developing and improving training and decision support technology in the US Navy This volume documents the lessons learned from TADMUS a programme of research driven by a common operational problem based on a common theoretical framework and employing a common methodology and task The military has long been in the vanguard of using human factors research to increase the efficiency and reduce the danger of critical tasks The abundant technical and operational accomplishments described here should be valuable to all front line personnel in high risk environments      Understanding the Impact of Emotional Stress on Crisis Decision Making Noel Allan Sawatzky, 2022-01-03 Motivational models are critical to understanding crisis decision making because leaders and their advisors are emotionally involved intent on reducing stress and motivated to find ways of advancing their interests while minimizing the risk of war The principal theoretical work on the subject is Irving Janis and Leon Mann s classic study of decision making published in 1977 While useful the book has a significant flaw Janis and Mann theorize that policy maker stress during crisis is derived from decision deliberation leading to a circular approach This book solves the identified problem by addressing circularity between the rise of psychological stress decision deliberation and dysfunctional behavior with an independent measure of decision conditions using cognitive complexity With an effective independent measure of stress the key contribution of this volume is a reformulation of Janis and Mann s model to render the construct more rigorous and empirically useful to the present day study of crisis decision making

Decision-Making Under Stress Rhona Flin,Eduardo Salas,Michael Straub,Lynne Martin,2017-03-02 In our high technology society there is a growing demand for a better understanding of decision making in high risk situations in order to improve selection training and operational performance Decision Making Under Stress presents a state of the art review of psychological theory in research and practice on decision making in high pressure and emergency situations It focuses on the experienced decision makers who deal with such risks principally on flight decks at civil emergencies in industrial settings and military environments The 29 chapters cover a wide range of perspectives and applications from aviation military industry and the emergency services The authors all international invited experts in their field are based in research centers and universities from Europe North America and Australia Their common interest is in the theories and methods of a new research domain called NDM naturalistic decision making This volume comprises the edited contributions to the Third International NDM conference sponsored by the US Army Research Institute and the US Naval Air Warfare Center which was held in Aberdeen Scotland in September 1996 The NDM researchers are interested in decision making in situations characterised by high risk time pressure uncertain goals ambiguous information and teamwork The extent to which the NDM approach can explain and predict human performance in such settings is a central theme discussed with many practical examples and applications This book is essential reading for applied psychologists pilots emergency commanders military officers high hazard managers safety and emergency response professionals

Understanding the Impact of Emotional Stress on Crisis Decision Making Noel Allan Sawatzky,2020 The main objective of this research project will be the development of an independent measure of decision maker stress levels This will be accomplished by conducting a psychological study of policymakers under pressure in case studies of crisis focusing on decision making conditions and their influence on cognitive processing An independent measure of stress can be specifically devised by evaluating policymaker statements for cognitive complexity in information processing When compared to complexity in non stressful situations the analysis of decision maker cognitive complexity in conditions of crisis will provide an effective independent measure of the decision making conditions in which foreign policy choices take place This will enable the opportunity for focused study of policymaker behavior and decisions Case studies will also provide a forum for exploring the behavioral pathologies that Janis and Mann specify and examining the quality of decisions executed in crisis The findings of this research will prove to be a valuable addition to the Janis and Mann conflict model and ultimately serve to combine or bridge cognitive and motivational psychology by using cognitive complexity to help improve a motivational model of decision making Performance Under Stress James Szalma, Peter A Hancock, 2018-10-09 The world is a dangerous place and recent events have served to make it less safe There are many arenas of conflict and even combat across the world Such situations are the quintessential expression of stress you stand in imminent danger and live with the knowledge that you may be attacked injured or even killed at any moment How do people perform under these conditions How do they keep a heightened level of vigilance when nothing may happen in their immediate location for weeks or even months What happens when the bullets actually start flying How is it you distinguish friend from foe and each from innocent bystanders when in immediate peril of your life Can we design technology to help people make good decisions in these ultimately hazardous situations To what degree does your membership in a team act to dissipate these particular effects Can we generate sufficiently stressful field exercises to simulate these conditions and can we train and or select those most able to withstand such adverse conditions How will the next generation of servicemen deal with these inherent problems These are the sorts of questions that Performance Under Stress addresses This book is derived largely from a multiple year multiple university initiative MURI on stress and soldier performance on the modern electronic battlefield It involved leading researchers from many institutions who have brought their individual expertise to bear on these crucial contemporary concerns United by a common research framework these groups attacked the issue from different methodological and conceptual approaches ranging from traditional laboratory modeling and experimentation to realistic simulations from involved field exercises to personal experiences of actual combat conditions The insights generated have been distilled and presented as a benchmark of current understanding and provide future directions for research in this arena Although this work focuses on soldier stress and soldier performance the principles that are derived extend well beyond this single application Their findings can be applied to people facing the demands of the business world or research as much as to those who meet life or death situations such as homeland security first responders and law enforcement personnel

Real-Life Decision-Making Mats Danielson,Love Ekenberg,2023-08-08 Have you ever experienced a decision situation that was hard to come to grips with Did you ever feel a need to improve your decision making skills Is this something where you feel that you have not learned enough practical and useful methods In that case you are not alone Even though decision making is both considered and actually is a very important skill in modern work life as well as in private life these skills are not to any reasonable extent taught in schools at any level No wonder many people do indeed feel the need to improve but have a hard time finding out how This book is an attempt to remedy this shortcoming of our educational systems and possibly also of our common partly intuition based decision culture Intuition is not at all bad quite the contrary but it has to co exist with rationality We will show you how Methods for decision making should be of prime concern to any individual or organisation even if the decision processes are not always explicitly or even consciously formulated All kinds of organisations as well as individuals must continuously make decisions of the most varied nature in order to prosper and attain their objectives A large part of the time spent in any organisation not least at management levels is spent gathering processing and compiling information for the purpose of making decisions supported by that information The same interest has hitherto not been shown for individual decision making even though large gains would also be obtained at a personal level if important personal decisions were better deliberated This book aims at changing that and thus attends to both categories of decision makers This book will take you through a journey starting with some history of decision making and analysis and then go through easy to learn ways of structuring decision information and methods for analysing the decision situations beginning with simple decision situations and then moving on to progressively harder ones but never losing sight of the overarching goal that the reader should be able to follow the progression and being able to carry out similar decision analyses in real life situations The Open Access version of this book available at www.taylorfrancis.com has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives 4.0 license
