Bird. A.B. MBA, 2012-05-24 This is a book intended to help the average voter sort out the constant stream of misinformation and rhetoric emanating from political candidates media talking heads and talk shows in order that they can formulate their own strategies about what's best for our country and intelligently exercise their most precious asset to support those who agree with their position their vote. What is suggested here is nonpolitical in terms of party or ideology and does not argue whether any economic theory offers the correct solution. It is concerned with the economic condition of the country and what political policies best impact the economy but does not support any party or radical group and the ideologies they promote to accomplish their solutions. Although a long term member of the Republican Party I claim no current party affiliation. This book offers methods of determining how political entities use tools designed to mask their true intent and gain the voters support. This is accomplished by identifying tactics used by parties talking heads and politicians to achieve their ends and by giving some basic economic training and review techniques to assist the voter in finding the factual information necessary to rebut the constant flow of rhetoric and fallacy with which they the voter are constantly bombarded. Conversations with friends family and business colleagues have convinced me that because we are continuously subjected to this rhetorical bombardment by all these groups we are confused. This confusion was clearly demonstrated by the November 2010 elections where as a nation we voted for individuals running on policies that will most likely make our major problems of GDP growth unemployment and deficit spending much worse. The worst part is the Tea Party and others told us they were going to cut social benefit programs but wrapped it up in a rhetorical blanket of fear. We're going bankrupt but we'll save you with our austerity programs and let's take our country back. Back from what I am sure we don't know. I am convinced that most of this constant flow of rhetoric is deliberate misinformation designed to control our thinking. I further believe we intuitively understand we are being manipulated and this understanding is at the heart of the anger and divisiveness rampant in the United States today. And because we can't deal with it we simply react to our frustrations unfortunately often with less than good judgment. This book is a simple step to help the voters of the United States make informed choices based on facts that support what they believe is best for the nation.

Economics, Politics, and American Public Policy James J. Gosling, Marc Allen Eisner, 2013. This text introduces students to the interrelationship of politics and economics in American public policymaking how economic concerns have been legislated into law since Franklin Roosevelt's time and how politics affects the economy and the making of public policy. Topics covered include How to measure various indicators of economic performance How the U.S. economy works domestically and internationally How and why policymakers act to stabilize an economy in an economic downturn. The book also covers major social insurance programs and the current fiscal issues concerning current and future costs. The book concludes with a full chapter case study on the Obama administration's response to the Great Recession and its dealings with Congress including the implementation of the Affordable Care Act.

Public Policy-making in the Mbeki Era Ndangwa Noyoo, 2015-09-15. This book examines public policy making in South Africa. Specifically it focuses on the period when Thabo Mbeki was the President of South Africa. The book argues that public policy making at the time was significantly influenced by Mbeki's vision coupled with his personal drive, commitment, sense of public duty, courage and strategic thinking relating to modern governance, African solidarity and internationalism. Due to Mbeki's qualities, South Africa followed a trajectory of modern nation state building. The book advances the discourse on public policy making. Lessons from the Mbeki era point to the fact that public policy making is about responding to human needs with a view to creating a more inclusive society. The book also drives home the point that public policy making requires decisive leadership as was provided by Mbeki when he was President of the Republic of South Africa. Professor Edwell Kaseke, School of Human and Community Development, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, South Africa.

Cost-Benefit Analysis and the Theory of Fuzzy Decisions Kofi Kissi Dompere, 2013-03-20. Criticism is the habitus of the contemplative intellect whereby we try to recognize with probability the genuine quality of a literary work by using appropriate aids and rules. In so doing, certain general and particular points must be considered. The art of interpretation or hermeneutics is the habitus of the contemplative intellect of probing into the sense of somewhat special text by using logical rules and suitable means. Note: Hermeneutics differs from criticism as the part does from the whole. Antonius Gvilielmus Amo Afer 1727. There is no such thing as absolute truth. At best it is a subjective criterion but one based upon valuation. Unfortunately, too many people place their fate in the hands of subjective without properly evaluating it. Arnold A. Kaufmann and Madan M. Gupta. The development of cost-benefit analysis and the theory of fuzzy decision was divided into two interdependent structures of identification and measurement theory on one hand and fuzzy value theory on the other. Each of them has sub-theories that constitute a complete logical system.
