Decision Making In The European Union:

Decision-Making in the European Union John Peterson, Elizabeth Bomberg, 1999-05-25 Based on exhaustive research this book explains how the European Union makes decisions in seven major policy sectors Written in a clear user friendly style it brings the EU alive for a student and non specialist audience The book s central themes are that informal norms often matter more than formal rules agency often matters more than structure and abrupt change often punctuates deadlock It offers a theoretically based introduction to the lively humorous and fascinating politics of a unique experiment in modern governance

Decision-making in the European Union John Peterson, Elizabeth E. Bomberg, 1996 Decision-making in the European Community Emil Joseph Kirchner, 1992 In this first major assessment of EC decision making at the highest levels for ten years Emil Kirchner examines the Council Presidency s role in European integration The author demonstrates how the EC Council Presidency plays a crucial role in the integration process enhanced by the Single European Act and the two Intergovernmental Conferences on EMU and Political Union He evaluates the balance and distribution of power between national and Community actors and asks whether the Council Presidency is primarily an instrument to maintain national control of EC decision making rather than a device for promoting integration He sheds light on the negotiations which led to the SEA and the two Intergovernmental Conferences and argues for a new interpretation of the relationship between the EC and its constituent states EC decision making is not characterised by a transfer of powers from the national to the EC level but by a sharing of competences between national and Community institutions and a pooling of sovereignties among member governments that is analogous to co operative federalism Decision making in the European Community will be vital reading for political scientists and students interested in the EC and for all those seeking to understand European integration potentially the 1990s most important political development Decision making in the EU before and after the Lisbon Treaty Madeleine Hosli, Amie Kreppel, Běla Plechanovová, Amy Verdun, 2017-10-02 Decision making in the European Union before and after the Lisbon Treaty aims to assess what the changes the Treaty of Lisbon envisaged and whether these ambitions have materialised since the Treaty entered into force It offers analyses of the past as well as what might be the future because some provisions will only enter into effect in the years to come To what extent has the current decision making process been able to address the shortcomings and challenges of the past What has been the impact of aspects of the Lisbon Treaty that clarified pre existing norms and structures in some cases formalizing them rather than introducing new changes The authors in this book look at the interaction between formal rules and informal practices seeking to point to the interaction between the two They find that informal practices to date typically still dominate formal rules This book was published as a special issue of West European Politics Decision-making in the European Union John Peterson, Elizabeth E. Bomberg, 1999 The European Union is a uniquely successful experiment in international cooperation and modern governance The creation of a single currency and impending eastern enlargement make EU decision making more important than ever before in determining how Europe is governed Based on exhaustive and original research this book provides a clear and theoretically grounded analysis of how the European Union makes decisions The book provides in depth coverage of a number of major policy sectors the internal market external trade agriculture cohesion the environment research and technological development and the Common Foreign and Security Policy Its central themes that informal norms often matter more than formal rules that agency often matters more than structure and that abrupt change often punctuates deadlock are developed systematically throughout Understanding Decision-making in the European Union John

Peterson,1994 European Decision Making and Legislative Process: Council and the European Parliament Julia Christin Bauer,2008-12-11 Seminar paper from the year 2008 in the subject Politics Topic European Union grade B Diplomatic Academy of Vienna School of International Studies course European Decision Making language English abstract QUESTION To what extent can one say that Council and the European Parliament are on an equal footing in the legislative process Use examples if possible to back up your answer The Council of the European Union and the European Parliament both play an important role in the legislative process of the European Union Once a proposal was submitted by the European Commission Council and Parliament will decide on the issue by using one of four forms of legislative procedures codecision consultation or assent and cooperation The choice of procedure depends on the policy area of the proposal Influence and power of Parliament and Council differ depending on the type of legislative procedure in use There are cases in which the Council is dominant for example in the decision on the directive on software patents and areas in which the Parliament is dominant such as the decision on stock storage of telecommunication data in 2005 The Political Process in the European Union: Decision Making Procedures and Implementation of Policy Harald Löberbauer,2006-07-28 Scientific Essay from the year 2005 in the subject Politics Topic European Union grade 2 Diplomatic Academy of Vienna School of International Studies course The political process of the EU decision making procedures language English abstract Answers two major questions 1 To what extent can one say that the Council and the EP are on an equal footing in the legislative process 2 The member state level and the European EU level do not work separately but constantly overlap in the EU decision making process for example by way of committees Do you agree and how could one practically illustrate this trend of interaction between the different levels Decision Making in the European Community Christoph Sasse,1977

European Council Simon Bulmer,Wolfgang Wessels,2015-12-22 Using a wide range of material the authors aim to provide a thorough assessment of the European Council s work from 1975 to 1985 They explain its fluctuating performance its impact on other European Community institutions and analyze it in the context of international and domestic issues

Policy-making in the European Union Helen Wallace,Mark A. Pollack,Alasdair R. Young,2015 The policies of the European Union profoundly affect the lives of people in Europe and around the world The new edition of this highly successful textbook outlines how and why such decisions are made as well as the key challenges faced by policy makers in the current political and economic climate

Decision-making in the European Union's Council of Ministers Sara

Hagemann, 2006 Drugs and Decision-making in the European Union Tim Boekhout van Solinge, 2002 Drugs are a perennial topic within the institutions of the European Union the Commission Council and Parliament The drug problem is also regularly tabled on the agenda of the European Council the biannual summit of the government leaders of the fifteen member states The E U systematically brings drug related issues into virtually all of its political dialogues with Third World countries and regional organizations It even stresses the importance of anti drug measures as part of trade agreements and development cooperation By such means the European Union has become an important player in the world of international drug control This book gives an overview of the European Union's anti drug measures and focuses on its decision making process It looks at why drugs have acquired a prominent position on the European political agenda and identifies the political function they serve in terms of domestic drug policy and international relations This study shows that instead of solving the drug problem the European Union's bureaucracy actually helps to keep it alive and well Tim Boekhout van Solinge is a researcher at the Centre for Drug Research of the University of Amsterdam

The Influence of Business Associations in the European Decision Making Process Uli Bethke, 2006-01-20 Inhaltsangabe Abstract Since the adoption of the Single European Act SEA in 1986 more and more competencies have been transferred by EU Member States to decision makers in Brussels Beside the objective of the completion of the Single Market the scope of Community policies has widened to political co operation technological development and social policy In addition the powers of the European Parliament were strengthened and qualified majority voting was introduced for decisions related to the completion of the internal market Since the summits of Maastricht and Amsterdam European integration has further gained in momentum National governments again handed over sovereignty to the European level Jacques Delors famous quote that 80% of regulations impacting on the economic sphere were decided in Brussels today demonstrates the shift of competency Within the last 15 years Brussels has become an important centre of power This transference of power to the European level also has affected the behaviour of interest groups Before 1986 it usually was sufficient to lobby the own national administration in order to influence regulations The main function of European peak organisations at the time was on the one hand to monitor events in Brussels and report them back to their member federations on the other hand they formed a transnational network for the exchange of information The growing power of European institutions and the strengthening of the supranational element within the European Union required interest groups to broaden their participation in the European decision making process In addition the technical problems regarding the realisation of the internal market e g harmonisation of services standardisation of products etc has triggered off an enormous demand for technical input on the side of the European institutions Since the adoption of the SEA thus interest groups have proliferated New groups with new interests have emerged Long established organisations have increased their financial and personnel resources After Washington D C

Brussels has become the second biggest boomtown for lobbying activities In 1992 the Commission has estimated that approximately 3000 special interest groups with a total of 10 000 lobbyists try to influence the institutions of the European Union The directory of interest groups lists 891 European peak organisations Beside these Eurogroups a myriad form of actors all trying to get The Politics of the European Union Herman Lelieveldt, Sebastiaan Princen, 2023-04-20 An introduction to the European Union from a comparative politics perspective systematically analysing its functioning through comparison with national political systems Decision-making in the European Union Elizabeth E. Bomberg, John Peterson, 1996-01-01 Decision-Making in the European Union (EU) Seda Gürkan, 2016 The European Union Decides Robert Thomson, Frans N. Stokman, Christopher H. Achen, Thomas König, 2006-09-14 European legislation affects countless aspects of daily life in modern Europe but just how does the European Union make such significant legislative decisions How important are the formal decision making procedures in defining decision outcomes and how important is the bargaining that takes place among the actors involved Using a combination of detailed evidence and theoretical rigour this volume addresses these questions and others that are central to understanding how the EU works in practice It focuses on the practice of day to day decision making in Brussels and the interactions that take place among the Member States in the Council and among the Commission the Council and the European Parliament A unique data set of actual Commission proposals are examined against which the authors develop apply and test a range of explanatory models of decision making exemplifying how to study decision making in other political systems using advanced theoretical tools and appropriate research design The Influence of Business Associations in the European Decision Making Process - A Case Study of the European Chamber of Commerce and Industry Uli Bethke, 2007-08 Diploma Thesis from the year 2000 in the subject Politics International Politics Topic European Union grade 1 5 A Free University of Berlin Otto Suhr Institute Berlin 97 entries in the bibliography language English abstract Overview Research on the role of Eurogroups in general and on European business associations in particular is very rare There has been a rapid expansion of such activities lobbying over the last few years However although this phenomenon has attracted a lot of attention there is surprisingly little systematic research on the topic Andersen and Eliassen 1991 In contrast to the role of interest groups in the US legislative process comparatively little is known about their role in Brussels Only a minority of the great many Eurogroups has been under examination by researchers so far While the European Trade Union Confederation ETUC has attracted considerable attention research has neglected the European confederation of employers and industry UNICE Hardly any studies are available on the multitude of business associations practically no research has been carried out on the role of consultants law firms and multinational corporations Objective The objective of the case study is to determine the influence EUROCHAMBRES as a business association representing SMEs has on the European decision making process It will provide answers to the following questions What are business associations What is the European decision making process What are the criteria and factors that determine the influence of interest groups on the policy process in general and on the EU decision making process in particular What are the indicators that tell us whether an interest organisation can meet these factors of influence In how far does EUROCHAMBRES meet the criteria that are relevant for influence in the European decision making process

Bureaucrats as Law-makers Frank M. Häge, 2013 The Council of Ministers is one of the most powerful institutions of the European Union EU and plays a major role in the European policy making process Drawing on formal theory and combining quantitative and qualitative methods in an innovative fashion this book provides novel insights into the role of national bureaucrats in legislative decision making of the Council of the EU The book examines and describes the Council of Ministers committee system and its internal decision making process Relying on a wide quantitative dataset as well as six detailed case studies in the policy areas of Agriculture Environment and Taxation it provides a comprehensive and systematic assessment of the extent to which national bureaucrats act as law makers in the Council It also examines the degree to which theories on collective decision making delegation and international socialization can account for variation in the involvement of bureaucrats Investigating how often and why national officials in working parties and committees rather than ministers make legislative decisions in the EU this book addresses the implications of bureaucratic influence for the democratic legitimacy of Council decision making The author finds that ministers play a generally more important role in legislative decision making than often assumed alleviating to some extent concerns about the democratic legitimacy of Council decisions Bureaucrats as Law Makers will be of interest to students scholars and practitioners in the field of European Union politics and policy making legislative decision making intergovernmental negotiations and international socialization
