

Question: What should we know about "consensus"? Explain the meaning of the "Consensus model" and its implications concerning structural change/transition.

Answer: Consensus: consensus building is a group decision-making process to reach group members sharing and agree on a decision while each has an active role/group of members goal. Consensus may be defined professionally as an acceptable consensus. It is defined as a decision made by consensus and the process of reaching a decision. Consensus building is thus concerned with the process of establishing and building a decision and the social, economic, legal, environmental and political effects of applying this process.

- Question: based on research, it would be far effective because it puts in place a simple, structured structure that requires a group members unity. The Consensus model is independent, self-structuring individual roles within working relationships for creating self-organization.

This process includes many things which might things are:

- Adopt consensus and information and shared with the rest of the group as well.
- Establishing working relationships and building relationships.
- Setting clear number of roles and roles to which to assign that each agreed to by the group.
- Make and establish relationships with groups as members are involved.
- Identify differences and structure for discussion. The structure (roles) or "consensus" in the Consensus model identifies areas of agreement and areas of disagreement to establish a clear path.
- The structure includes the nature of the discussion, such as there are other members and groups as "manager" of the discussion.
- The group can be advised to negotiate for the discussion and the structure follows on the process.

Systems for Sustainability Frank A. Stowell, Ray L. Ison, Rosalind Armson, Jacky Holloway, Sue Jackson, Steve McRobb, 2013-11-11 The term sustainability has entered the lexicon of many academic disciplines and fields of professional practice but to date does not appear to have been seriously considered within the systems community unless perhaps under other guises Within the wider community there is no consensus around what sustainability means with some authors identifying 70 to 100 definitions of the term Some see sustainability as the precise and quantifiable outcomes of biological systems whilst others see it in terms of processes relevant to personal and organizational change with the potential to effect changes in our relationships with our environments Internationally it has been increasingly used in relation to the term sustainable development a term popularised by the Brundland Commission s report in 1987 entitled Our Common Future Despite this diversity and polarised perception on its utility unlike many other popular terms it has not had its time and subsided quietly from our language It is therefore timely for the systems community to explore the relationship between systems and sustainability in a range of contexts Participants in this the 5th International Conference of the United Kingdom Systems Society UKSS have been invited to reflect critically on the contribution of systems thinking and action to sustainability to the sustainability of personal relationships the organizations in which live and work and our natural environment A Convergent Model of Renewal C. Wess Daniels, 2015-02-20 A Convergent Model of Renewal addresses a perceived crisis for faith traditions How do we continue to value tradition while allowing for innovative and contextual expressions of faith to emerge How do we foster deeper participation and decentralization of power rather than entrenched institutionalism Drawing on insights from contemporary philosophy contextual theology and participatory culture C Wess Daniels calls for a revitalization of faith traditions In A Convergent Model of Renewal he proposes a model that holds together both tradition and innovation in ways that foster participatory change This convergent model of renewal is then applied to two case studies based in the Quaker tradition one from the early part of the tradition and the second from an innovative community today The model however is capable of being implemented and adapted by communities with various faith backgrounds 22 Steps to a Great Catholic Parish James N.
