Decentralised Ngo Management:

Decentralised NGO Management Sara Gibbs, 2000-01-01 This report includes commissioned studies of the experience of INGOs in decentralizing their management to regional or country offices It includes the findings of a seminar held to compare the experiences of several larger INGOs The overall study looks critically at the confusions made by agencies between devolution decentralisation and indegenisation amongst other changes in management and accountability structures It concludes that either INGOs have to introduce much closer monitoring and formal performance criteria for their field operations or they have to genuinely hand over power to local forms of governance Decentralised Government and NGOs

Decentralisation of Administration, Policy Making and Forest Management in Ketapang District, West Kalimantan Endriatmo Soetarto, M. T. Felix Sitorus, M. Yusup Napiri, 2001-01-01 This study examines the preliminary impacts of Indonesia's decentralization process on the administration and management of forest resources in Ketapang District West Kalimantan The case study is based on field work carried out in mid 2000 using a rapid appraisal methodology The report covers the impacts of decentralization in three areas in particular customary adat communities oil palm and rubber plantations and conservation issues related to Gunung Palang National Park In each of these areas the authors examine struggles among competing interest groups that have arisen under decentralization The study finds that with the shift of administrative authority to the district level the district government in Ketapang took measures to generate local sources of revenues by issuing large numbers of small scale timber extraction permits and to legalize the transport of timber that had otherwise been harvested illegally The study also finds that the very limited flow of formal revenues from the Gunung Palang National Park to the district government has encouraged an escalation of illegal logging within the park's boundaries It is recommended that the Ketapang district government become more involved in administering the national park to ensure that economic interests of both the district government and local communities are accommodated in the park's management

Decentralization of Forest Administration in Indonesia Christopher M. Barr, Ida Aju Pradnja Resosudarmo, Ahmad Dermawan, John McCarthy, Moira Moeliono, Bambang Setiono, 2006-01-01 Since the collapse of Soeharto s New Order regime in May 1998 Indonesia s national provincial and district governments have engaged in an intense struggle over how authority and the power embedded in it should be shared How this ongoing struggle over authority in the forestry sector will ultimately play out is of considerable significance due to the important role that Indonesia s forests play in supporting rural livelihoods generating economic revenues and providing environmental services This book examines the process of forestry sector decentralization that has occurred in post Soeharto Indonesia and assesses the implications of more recent efforts by the national government to recentralize administrative authority over forest resources. It aims to describe the dynamics of decentralization in the forestry sector to document major changes that occurred as district governments assumed a greater role in administering forest resources and to assess what the ongoing struggle among Indonesia's national, provincial and district governments is likely to mean for forest sustainability, economic development at multiple levels and rural livelihoods. Drawing from primary research conducted by numerous scientists both at CIFOR and its many Indonesian and international partner institutions since 2000, this book sketches the sectoral context for current governmental reforms by tracing forestry development and the changing structure of forest administration from Indonesia's independence in 1945 to the fall of Soeharto's New Order regime in 1998. The authors further examine the origins and scope of Indonesia's decentralization laws in order to describe the legal regulatory framework within which decentralization has been implemented both at the macro level and specifically within the forestry sector. This book also analyses the decentralization of Indonesia's fiscal system and describes the effects of the country's new fiscal balancing arrangements on revenue flows from the forestry sector and describes the dynamics of district level timber regimes following the adoption of Indonesia's decentralization laws. Finally, this book also examines the real and anticipated effects of decentralization on land tenure and livelihood security for communities living in and around forested areas and summarizes major findings and options for possible interventions to strengthen the forestry reform efforts currently underway in Indonesia.

Engaging Beneficiaries for Development Participation Nandita Dutta, 2023-07-12 This book provides an understanding of and adds to the literature on the prerequisites for development participation through examining beneficiary engagement by both governmental and non-governmental organisations (GOs and NGOs). This book is a valuable addition to the literature on and practice of maximising the effectiveness of development programs through beneficiary engagement in Third World Countries. Previous literature in this field utilises the concept of beneficiary participation in order to make development people-centred. Much has been discussed on why participation is needed to make development meaningful. However, when and how development participation occurs in its practical application is an as yet unresearched topic. This book fills this knowledge gap with insights and evidence identified in the development context of Bangladesh.

Handbook of Research on Resource Management and the Struggle for Water Sustainability in Africa Nojiyeza, Innocent Simphiwe, Mtapuri, Oliver, Bazaanah, Prosper, Netshiozwi, Edzisani Ellen, 2022-01-28 Access to water and sanitation remains a critical challenge in various countries in Africa. The crisis remains the crisis of governance rather than the physical and economic scarcity. In most countries, water is realized as a human right and subsidies are provided for the indigent households. The tricky issue in rural areas remains an issue of access that is often linked to willingness and ability to pay for the installation and daily consumption The Handbook of Research on Resource Management and the Struggle for Water Sustainability in Africa presents practical examples of integrated water resources management IWRM implementation in African countries It further addresses the contemporary issues of alternative energy as part of climate change mitigation and utilizes case studies to examine how communities adapt to climate change Covering topics such as climate justice ecological governance and political ecology this major reference work is a dynamic resource for government officials sociologists climate scientists activists students and educators of higher education academicians and researchers in the fields of social sciences

Singh,Priyanie Amerasinghe,2014-05-27 The population of cities around the world is growing at an alarming rate and as a result the landscapes of most cities are going through enormous changes In particular fertile agricultural lands at the periphery of cities are being developed without consideration of holistic planning. As such peri urban areas, zones of transition from rural to urban land uses located between the outer limits of the urban and the rural environment, are experiencing significant losses of agricultural land, increased runoff and water quality degradation. Concurrently, the demands for water, food and energy are increasing within cities and unless a balance is struck, the liveability of these cities will soon be compromised. The current water and land use changes have serious consequences on lifestyle, environment, health and overall well being of urban communities. This book therefore helps readers to understand the current issues and challenges and examines suitable strategies and practices to cope with current and future pressures of urbanisation and peri urban land use changes. The book examines a number of critical aspects in relation to the future of cities and peri urban regions, including the suitability of policies and institutions to sustain cities into the future, impact of current trends in land use change, population increase and water demand, long term planning needs and approaches to ensure the secured future for generations ahead and strategies to adapt the cities and land uses so that they remain viable and liveable. The readership of the book will include policy makers, urban planners, researchers, post graduate students in urban planning and environmental and water resources management and managers in municipal councils.
