

DECISION MAKING FOR INCOMPETENT PERSONS

The Law and Morality of Who Shall Decide

SHANNON M. JORDAN, Ph.D.

*Department of Philosophy and Religion
George Mason University
Fairfax, Virginia*

This timely study deals with the social and political aspects of what are known as fundamental interest decisions, particularly abortion decisions for minors and treatment refusal or termination decisions for all incompetent persons. The author first places the dilemma into its legal context, then determines the nature and purpose of these decisions. She examines each of the various forums that have been proposed as the correct locus for such decision making — the medical profession, the family, the court, the ethics committee — to ascertain which can best fulfill the revealed purpose of the decision. These thoughtful and provocative discussions will interest all who become involved when others are unable to properly decide for themselves.
