Coenen,D. Huitema,Laurence J. O'Toole Jr.,2012-12-06 It is clear that our society must become a more sustainable one To that end we must change both our production and our consumption patterns Some argue that this implies the abolition of democratic processes and thus of citizens participation in environmental policy Others argue the opposite the only way to avoid impending environmental disaster is by engaging in common deliberation and contemplation Is participation then a negative force or not This volume is one of the first coordinated attempts to study the relationship between democratic participatory forms of decision making and the quality of environmental decisions The central question is how can the normatively desirable practice of participatory decision making be combined with an effective approach to environmental issues Guided by a theoretical introduction by the editors the 15 chapters deal with topics ranging from the scale of environmental problems local agenda 21 infrastructural decisions strategic planning to environmental policy in developing countries Three chapters are devoted to each of these broad themes Each presents either a theoretical or an empirical argument about the central research question shedding light on such issues as the measurement of decision quality participation techniques and the link between participation and decision quality drawing on experience gained in Europe North and South America Asia and Africa The introductions to the individual parts of the book have been collectively written by the contributors who represent a range of professional disciplines including political science public policy and planning
