Decision Making and Juvenile Justice Paul E. Tracy, 2002-03-30 Based on a comprehensive study of three counties in Texas this work examines the idea of differential handling of minority youth offenders Traditional wisdom indicates that minorities are over represented in the juvenile justice system due to racism and discrimination within the system itself The author refutes this logic by challenging current studies and examining the results of the Texas study The findings suggest that minorities are represented in the juvenile justice system in greater numbers than their majority offender counterparts due to their greater involvement in criminal activity not to any differential treatment they may receive at crucial decision points within the system Allegations of racial bias against the juvenile justice system are often supported by the federal government which suggests that minorities continue to be targeted more frequently for arrest prosecution conviction and imprisonment merely because they are persons of color Drawing on new research the author addresses racial disparity in the juvenile justice system and contends that previous research suffers methodological and statistical analysis problems resulting in the mischaracterization of the issue of racial bias The present study argues that most minority juveniles receive different case outcomes because of the severity of their current offense and both the length and severity of their prior delinquency careers Tracy s research ultimately indicates that rather than being discriminatory the juvenile system is instead reacting to a particular type of delinquent using legally permissible guidelines The Supreme Court and Juvenile Justice Christopher P. Manfredi, 1998 Taking in a century of change this work focuses on how the Supreme Court brought the juvenile court system under constitutional control It describes the case of Gerald Gault an Arizona teenager who was sent to reform school for making an obscene phone call Federal Register , 1987 Reforming Juvenile Justice National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Law and Justice, Committee on Assessing Juvenile Justice Reform, 2013-06-22 Adolescence is a distinct yet transient period of development between childhood and adulthood characterized by increased experimentation and risk taking a tendency to discount long term consequences and heightened sensitivity to peers and other social influences A key function of adolescence is developing an integrated sense of self including individualization separation from parents and personal identity Experimentation and novelty seeking behavior such as alcohol and drug use unsafe sex and reckless driving are thought to serve a number of adaptive functions despite their risks Research indicates that for most youth the period of risky experimentation does not extend beyond adolescence

ceasing as identity becomes settled with maturity Much adolescent involvement in criminal activity is part of the normal developmental process of identity formation and most adolescents will mature out of these tendencies Evidence of significant changes in brain structure and function during adolescence strongly suggests that these cognitive tendencies characteristic of adolescents are associated with biological immaturity of the brain and with an imbalance among developing brain systems This imbalance model implies dual systems one involved in cognitive and behavioral control and one involved in socio emotional processes Accordingly adolescents lack mature capacity for self regulations because the brain system that influences pleasure seeking and emotional reactivity develops more rapidly than the brain system that supports self control This knowledge of adolescent development has underscored important differences between adults and adolescents with direct bearing on the design and operation of the justice system raising doubts about the core assumptions driving the criminalization of juvenile justice policy in the late decades of the 20th century It was in this context that the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention OJJDP asked the National Research Council to convene a committee to conduct a study of juvenile justice reform The goal of Reforming Juvenile Justice A Developmental Approach was to review recent advances in behavioral and neuroscience research and draw out the implications of this knowledge for juvenile justice reform to assess the new generation of reform activities occurring in the United States and to assess the performance of OJJDP in carrying out its statutory mission as well as its potential role in supporting scientifically based reform efforts

Recriminalizing Delinquency Simon I. Singer,1997-11-13 Recriminalizing Delinquency examines attempts to transfer jurisdiction over juveniles accused of violent crime to criminal court Document Retrieval Index ,1976 Juvenile Offending Thom Brooks,2023-05-31 Tackling juvenile offending has become a key part of crime reduction strategies The articles selected for this volume examine juvenile offending from various critical perspectives and represent the work of the most influential international figures in the field The issues addressed include the different needs and perspectives of youth offenders whether offenders should be treated differently from others because of their age recommendations of policy changes identification of risk factors issues surrounding the sentencing of juvenile offenders and the relevance of restorative justice Corrections Jeanne B. Stinchcomb,2011-05-03 The Fourth Edition is available for online and hybrid courses and is also customizable in inexpensive paperback forms with other materials instructors may wish to assign their students The text and its companion website has been designed for use in online and hybrid courses as well as in conventional bricks and mortar classes The text is also customizable in inexpensive paperback format instructors may select only those chapters which they wish to assign The Changing Borders of Juvenile Justice Jeffrey Fagan, Franklin E. Zimring,2000-09 Since the 1960s recurring cycles of political activism over youth crime have motivated efforts to remove adolescents from the juvenile court Periodic surges of crime youth violence in the 1970s the spread of gangs in the 1980s and more recently epidemic gun violence and drug related crime have spurred laws and policies aimed at narrowing the reach of the juvenile court Despite declining juvenile crime rates every state in the country has increased the number of youths tried and punished as adults Research in this area has not kept pace with these legislative developments There has never been a detailed sociolegal analytic book devoted to this topic In this important collection researchers discuss policy substantive procedural and empirical dimensions of waivers and where the boundaries of the courts lie Part 1 provides an overview of the origins and development of law and contemporary policy on the jurisdiction of adolescents Part 2 examines the effects of jurisdictional shifts Part 3 offers valuable insight into the developmental and psychological aspects of current and future reforms Contributors Donna Bishop Richard Bonnie M A Bortner Elizabeth Cauffman Linda Frost Clausel Robert O Dawson Jeffrey Fagan Barry Feld Charles Frazier Thomas Grisso Darnell Hawkins James C Howell Akiva Liberman Richard Redding Simon Singer Laurence Steinberg David Tanenhaus Marjorie Zatz and Franklin E Zimring
