Decisive Battles of the World Edward Shepherd Creasy, 1899

The Pursuit of Victory Brian Bond, 1998 In Western Europe and North America the idea that war can deliberately be used as an instrument of policy has become unfashionable not least because of the carnage of two World Wars and the Americans humiliating experience in Vietnam But wars are still fought Those who start wars clearly believe they are worthwhile Why In this original and provocative study Brian Bond discusses the successes and failures of military and political leaders in their pursuit of victory over the last two centuries Professor Bond argues that in order to be counted victorious a leader has to progress beyond military triumph to preserve the political control needed to secure an advantageous and enduring peace settlement Napoleon was a brilliant general but failed as a statesman Bismarck on the other hand was a success in skilfully exploiting Moltke's victories on the battlefield to create a unified Germany In the First World War Germany and her allies were defeated but at such great cost that confidence in the idea that war could be controlled and the pursuit of victory made rational received a terrible shock Germany and Japan exploited their military opportunities between 1939 and 1942 but lack of political control and moderation brought them catastrophic defeat After 1945 nuclear weapons and the increased complexity of international relations blurred the identity of victors and losers and seemed to make the idea of a decisive victory almost unthinkable But this study warns against the assumption that war as an instrument of policy has now been completely discarded The Falklands and Gulf conflicts show that aggressors are still prepared to risk war for tangible goals and that their opponents are quite capable of responding successfully to such challenges
