Glass, It is hardly necessary to day to advance a plea for the teaching of drawing design and craft work Their importance is or should be recognised by all authorities on education It is well however that the teacher should have a clear comprehension of the part played by these subjects in the development of the intellect and character of the scholar This is essential firstly that he may have confidence in his teaching with a corresponding strength of purpose and enthusiasm and secondly that he may be in a position to defend effectively his belief in the work he is doing Despite the fact that the majority of educational authorities recognise its value critics still abound who would have us believe that such work merely panders to effeminate tastes and a love of luxury whilst denying its practical utility Such critics need to be confuted and this can only be done by formulating definite reasons for the serious study of the subjects in hand At the outset we must recognise that man is complex and many sided hence his needs are complex and multifarious An unfortunate tendency exists in some quarters to regard human beings merely as productive machines with a capacity for executing so much work upon which the profit usually accruing to those holding this view will be so much and that education should therefore be designed on this basis Such an opinion is unworthy of consideration and may be dismissed at once It must be granted that as far as possible all human capacities are worth developing otherwise the curriculum will have a bias tending to develop certain faculties leaving others to become atrophied It is in some such comprehensive scheme that art work as here dealt with plays its part It develops certain powers for which no scope is permitted in other subjects The faculty of observation is quickened by training the vision whilst the memory is cultivated to retain the images thus correctly seen Drawing is a method of expression older by far and more natural than writing for the alphabet in use to day is a development of early picture writing Again the child as soon as he can walk endeavours to express graphically the beings and objects amongst which he lives making no attempt to write

Art and Modernism in Socialist China Shuyu Kong,Julia F. Andrews,Shengtian Zheng,2024-06-06 This edited volume will be the first book examining the art history of China s socialist period from the perspective of modernism modernity and global interactions The majority of chapters are based on newly available archival materials and fresh critical frameworks concepts By shifting the frame of interpretation from socialist realism to socialist modernity this study reveals the plurality of the historical process of developing modernity in China the autonomy of artistic agency and the complexity of an art world conditioned yet not completely confined by its surrounding political and ideological apparatus The unexpected global exchanges examined by many of the authors in this study and the divergent approaches topics and genres they present add new sources and insights to this research field revealing an art history that is heterogeneous pluralistic and multi layered The book will be of interest to scholars working in art history art and politics and Chinese studies

New Concepts in Paper Quilling Marie Browning, 2008 Quilling also known as paper filigree or scroll work is the art of rolling very thin strips of paper into elegant shapes turning them into beautiful designs and then gluing them onto a base for display In addition to offering 28 unique shapes it introduces some contemporary quilling possibilities such as husking fringing crimping and sculpting from publisher description

Uplifting the South Kathleen Curtis Wilson, 2006 Although Scarlett O'Hara is a fictional character developed by a skilful author there were some real Southern women who truly possessed legendary strengths One such woman is Mary Sullivan a 19th century woman with an iron will persuasive Southern charm and motives that were selfless in contrast to Scarlett's entirely selfish ones Sullivan deserves recognition for her contribution to the South and to all of American society as the role of women changed dramatically in the 19th and 20th centuries In 1860 Sullivan was a strikingly beautiful twenty four year old woman endowed with allure and social graces born of her prominent Virginia lineage and rich Southern culture A benevolent agent for the needs of children and a supporter of education for underprivileged youth in Appalachia Sullivan was a committed humanitarian throughout her life Sullivan lived two different kinds of life in one lifetime Her adult life was spent in New York City during a period of American history unsurpassed for violence and change but Sullivan's daring exploits in Virginia during the Civil War and her efforts on behalf of Southern Reconstruction are fascinating stories that show the passionate personality of a determined woman Sullivan's greatest though least acknowledged gift to human kind is her legacy to Appalachia that has extensive regional significance one hundred years of helping young adults with few financial resources receive scholarship money to complete their education
