classic tradition proportion and the relation of voids to masses gradually came to be regarded as the chief decorative values of the interior. Portable hangings were in consequence replaced by architectural ornament; in other words the architecture of the room became its decoration. This architectural treatment held its own through every change of taste until the second quarter of the present century, but since then various influences have combined to sever the natural connection between the outside of the modern house and its interior. In the average house the architect's task seems virtually confined to the elevations and floor plan. The designing of what are to-day regarded as insignificant details such as mouldings, architraves and cornices has become a perfunctory work hurried over and unregarded, and when this work is done the upholsterer is called in to decorate and furnish the rooms.
