Fuller Sight is a metaphysical novel Much of the book takes place outside of time as we know it Danny Anderson is an 18 year old young man who has decided that he needs to make the ultimate sacrifice to protect the girl he loves from throwing away her dreams of becoming a doctor He kills himself by running his father s car into a bridge s concrete abutment Upon his death he meets his mother Nora Anderson who died nine years earlier She is his guide for the remainder of the book helping him review and better understand himself and those around him As he reviews his life we gain a better understanding of his father brother and the Nigerian American family across the street who became a second family after his mother died in an automobile accident We especially become acquainted with that family s daughter and Danny s best friend Sad Okoro Their friendship becomes mildly romantic to the point of Sad expressing her dream of going to college together which Danny believes is financially out of reach In any case her university plans with Danny are abruptly shunted when she witnesses a drunken Mitchell Anderson violently slap Danny on the 9th anniversary of Nora s death Sad takes Danny to be tended to by her mother Ezzine Okoro Danny experiences complete memory loss due to his father s blow That night Mitchell dies in his sleep due to an accidental overdose accompanied by liquor The next day Mitchell is discovered dead in his bed and the death is deemed suspicious Circumstantial evidence along with a violent scene the day before makes Danny a person of interest Sad is convinced of Danny s innocence but Danny has less trust in himself than she has in him She determines to tell the police she was the one responsible reasoning that if the detectives have more than one suspect then their theory of the case would be so weakened that they wouldn t be able to charge Danny All throughout this story Nora and Danny see all of this as well as the fuller view They come to understand the karmic life lessons and how the greater community both living and dead are all on a path to grow learn and love each other No one is excluded in the greater community not even those who think and do their worst This same process continues as Nora guides Danny through previous lives as the son of South Carolina plantation owners in 1775 as a blind beggar and former commander of the royal guard in the Gorkha Kingdom near Tibet and India in 1680 as a monk and former heir to an English nobleman in 1349 as a widow and spy in Philadelphia Pennsylvania in 1780 as an observer of Danny s grandmother when she was a suffragette in Washington DC in 1917 and finally back
