entries in the bibliography language English abstract Whether at local regional or national level sport is after war probably the principal means of collective identification in modern life Max Horkheimer suggested that as modern civilization is threatened on all sides sport has become a kind of world in itself that we should stake our hopes on The kind of sport which for centuries a small but influential part of Britons has been staking their hopes on is fox hunting Like all forms of hunting fox hunting is a blood sport i.e. the killing of wild animals as a form of sport As such it is controversial Animal welfare activists claim fox hunting to be an elitist and barbaric sport that should be banned pro hunters argue that it is an effective and humane method of controlling the fox population Yet after all hunting is a part of British history and tradition an intrinsic part of living in the countryside The paper focuses on the history of fox hunting in Britain the ongoing controversy since 1940 and the Pros and Cons to this centuries old British sport In the last chapter reactions and effects to the 2004 ban on fox hunting are named Does the ban really mark the end of this traditional British sport Manual of British Rural Sports

John Henry Walsh, 1859 National Identity in Great Britain and British North America, 1815-1851 Linda E. Connors, Mary Lu MacDonald, 2011 Examining the complex world of print culture in the nineteenth century Connors and MacDonald show how periodicals in the United Kingdom and British North America shaped and promoted ideals about national identity The authors striking history of an understudied period in the history of print culture sheds light on the underlying myth of British transcendence and progress that emerged with such force and appeal after 1815

British Rural Sports John Henry Walsh, 2021-11-04 Reprint of the original first published in 1867 Deer of Britain and Ireland Peter Carne, 2000 An account of the history and distribution of deer in Britain and Ireland It describes the various species found in the wild and examines the environmental impact of their rising numbers management trends and problems arising from them The author is a contributor to Stalking Magazine Manual of British Rural Sports ... Stonehenge (pseud. [i.e. John Henry Walsh.]), 1871 A Delicate Taste Bud Robin Lambert, Manual of British rural sports, by Stonehenge John Henry Walsh, 1859 Picturing Animals in Britain, 1750-1850 Diana Donald, 2007-01-01 From fine art paintings by such artists as Stubbs and Landseer to zoological illustrations and popular prints a vast array of animal images was created in Britain during the century from 1750 to 1850 This highly original book investigates the rich meanings of these visual representations as well as the ways in which animals were actually used and abused What Diana Donald discovers in this fascinating study is a deep and unresolved ambivalence that lies at the heart of human attitudes toward animals The author brings to light dichotomies in human thinking about animals throughout this key period awestruck with the beauty and spirit of wild animals people nevertheless desired to capture and tame them the belief that other species are inferior was firmly held yet at the same time animals in stories and fables were given human attributes though laws against animal cruelty were introduced the overworking of horses and the allure of sport hunting persisted Animals are central in cultural history Donald concludes and compelling questions about them then and now remain unanswered
