Inventing the modern region Talitha Ilacqua, 2024-03-12 This book explores the process by which the French Basque country acquired a folkloric regional identity in the long nineteenth century It argues that despite its origins in pre modern customs this stereotypical identity was invented as part of France s process of nation building The abolition of privileges in 1789 prompted a new interest in local culture as the defining feature of provincial France shaping the transition from the pre modern province to the modern region The relationship between the region and the nation however was difficult Regional culture favoured the integration of the French Basque provinces into the French nation state but also challenged the authority of the central state As a result Basque region building reveals the strengths and weaknesses of the unitary model of French nationhood in the nineteenth century as well as today Basque Nationalism and Political Violence Cameron Watson, 2007 This text examines the relationship between ideas and action through a historical account of how images of violence and warfare pervaded the discourse of Basque nationalism Watson argues that a culture of political violence emerged within the Basque nationalist movement that eventually resulted in the 1959 creation of ETA Alejandro Aldekoa Sabin Bikandi, 2009 An investigation into the life and music of Basque pipe and tabor dance music master Alejandro Aldekoa Includes DVD of dance performances Provided by publisher Oral-Scriptal Dimensions of Scripture, Piety, and Practice Werner H. Kelber, Paula A. Sanders, 2016-09-30 In April 2008 a conference was convened at Rice University that brought together experts in the three monotheistic religions of Judaism Christianity and Islam The papers discussed at the conference are presented here revised and updated The thirteen contributions comprise the keynote address by John Miles Foley three essays on Judaism and the Hebrew Bible three on the New Testament three on the Qur an and two summarizing pieces by the Africanist Ruth Finnegan and the Islamicist William Graham respectively The central thesis of the book states that sacred Scripture was experienced by the three faiths less as a text contained between two covers and a literary genre and far more as an oral phenomenon In developing the performative recitative aspects of the three religions the authors directly or by implication challenge their distinctly textual identities Instead of viewing the three faiths as quintessential religions of the book these writers argue that the religions have been and continue to be appropriated not only as written but also very much as oral authorities with the two media interpenetrating and mutually influencing each other in myriad ways

In recent decades the focus of Folklore Studies has shifted from analysing the products of oral traditions as texts to examining the ways in which people use and produce these items and the areas of study have broadened to include vernacular cultures and genres in diverse verbal and material forms. As evident from the introduction and twelve chapters of this collection these interests are today shared by several disciplines that cooperate in the area of cultural studies. This book provides insights into current questions about the nature of words; it discusses both the inherent essence of vernacular expression and how that essence is tied to various genre ecological performative and material environments. The chapters include studies on the poetics form function performance and composition of traditional and new vernacular forms including explorations of hybridity materiality and change as well as critical examinations of archival practices and publication processes.
