Building American Submarines 1914-1940:

Building American Submarines, 1914-1940 Gary E. Weir, 2000-04 In this volume Gary E Weir assesses the Navy's efforts between 1914 and 1940 to develop effective submarines. In particular the author describes the work of the Navy and private industry that allowed the relatively primitive submersible of the First World War period to be replaced by the fleet submarine that fought in the Second World War. Building American Submarines argues that there was a fundamental shift in the relationship between the Navy and its submarine suppliers during this period. After being completely dependent upon private industry in 1914, the Navy and industry controlled the design and construction process by the eve of the Second World War. As a result, the Navy was able to acquire high quality submarines to fulfill the nation's strategic requirements. When we entered the Second World War, these new submarines were ready to undertake prolonged and effective antishipping operations in distant waters. That capability was of enormous importance in the ensuing triumph of American sea power over Imperial Japan. In tracing these developments, the author provides insights into the goals of the naval submarine leaders, the evolution of the American submarine industry, the influence of German undersea technology, and strategic requirements foreseen by naval planners. The Navy's historians hope that this case study of the problems and successes involved in a major weapons acquisition program will be of particular interest to naval personnel involved in that process today as well as to representatives of the industrial firms that supply the needs of the modern Navy.

The American Experience in World War II: The atomic bomb in history and memory Walter L. Hixson, 2003 World War II changed the face of the United States, catapulting the country out of economic depression, political isolation, and social conservatism. Ultimately, the war was a major formative factor in the creation of modern America. This unique twelve-volume set provides comprehensive coverage of this transformation in its domestic policies, diplomatic relations, and military strategies, as well as the changing cultural and social arenas. The collection presents the history of the creation of a super power prior to, during, and after the war, analyzing all major phases of the U.S. involvement, making it a one-stop resource that will be essential for all libraries supporting a history curriculum. This volume is available on its own or as part of the twelve-volume set The American Experience in World War II. Mobilizing for Modern War Paul A. C. Koistinen, 1997 In this volume Koistinen examines war planning and mobilizing in an era of rapid industrialization and reveals how economic mobilization for defense and war is shaped at the national level by the interaction of political, economic, and military institutions, and by increasingly powerful and expensive weaponry.

Palmer, 1992 Damn the Torpedoes Tamara Moser Melia, 1991 Power and Change Thomas Hone, 1989 Forged in War Gary E. Weir, 1993 This book is the first to analyze the partnership between the Navy industry and science forged by World War II and responsible for producing submarines in the United States in the period from 1940 through 1961 The naval industrial complex was not the result of a single historical event Neither was it a political economic entity Instead it was made up of many unique and distinct components all of which developed simultaneously each reflected the development significance and construction of a particular vessel or technology within its historical context Together these components emerged from World War II as a network of distinct relationships linked together by the motives of national defense mutual growth and profit None of the major players in the drama planned or predetermined the naval industrial complex and it did not conform to the views of any individual or confirm the value of a particular system of management Instead it grew naturally in response to the political environment strategic circumstances and perceived national need its character defined gradually not only by the demands of international conflict but also by the scores of talented people interested in the problems and possibilities of submarine warfare Their combined efforts during this short period of time produced remarkable advances in nuclear propulsion submerged speed quieting underwater sound and weaponry as well as a greater appreciation within the Navy and the shipbuilding industry for the ocean environment This book won the Roosevelt Prize for naval history

Weir,1992 His considerable talents as a politician shipbuilder strategist propagandist and manager were to a great degree responsible for the High Seas Fleet encountered by the Royal Navy at Jutland Ironically von Tirpitz never commanded the navy he built Weir does not fail to delineate the shortcomings of his naval system which was responsible for the fact that those in charge of the fleet s operations played little part in its creation Von Tirpitz s system also resulted in a disregard of the significance of U boat potential and a lack of geographic strategic and operational considerations Nevertheless his profound influence in the navy persisted through the Weimar Republic and into the Third Reich in the policies of Admiral Erich Raeder veteran of Jutland Naval History ,2020 The Journal of Military History ,2004-07 "Execute Against Japan" Joel Ira Holwitt,2009-04 Less than five hours after the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor U S naval leaders reluctantly chose to pursue a form of warfare they despised targeting not only Japanese military assets but also civilian operated fishing trawlers freighters and tankers The move to unrestricted submarine warfare represented a major change in the longstanding American adherence to the classic doctrine of freedom of the seas under which commercial vessels were held to have the right to navigate the oceans without threat of attack This dramatic about face in naval policy potentially as controversial Nautilus Roy Davies,1995 Nautilus tells the story of the submarine a vessel which revolutionized naval warfare in the course of 50 years and the men who designed them and worked on them In their short history submarines and submersible craft have played a decisive role in two world wars and today they roam the oceans bearers of nuclear arsenals ready to surface anywhere and strike any target Materializing the Military Bernard S.
