House. Committee on Education and Labor. General Subcommittee on Labor,1967 Building American Submarines, 1914-1940 Gary E. Weir,2000-04 In this volume Gary E Weir assesses the Navy s efforts between 1914 and 1940 to develop effective submarines In particular the author describes the work of the Navy and private industry that allowed the relatively primitive submersible of the First World War period to be replaced by the fleet submarine that fought in the Second World War Building American Submarines argues that there was a fundamental shift in the relationship between the Navy and its submarine suppliers during this period After being completely dependent upon private industry in 1914 the Navy not industry controlled the design and construction process by the eve of the Second World War As a result the Navy was able to acquire high quality submarines to fulfill the nation's strategic requirements. When we entered the Second World War these new submarines were ready to undertake prolonged and effective antishipping operations in distant waters. That capability was of enormous importance in the ensuing triumph of American sea power over Imperial Japan. In tracing these developments the author provides insights into the goals of the naval submarine leaders, the evolution of the American submarine industry, the influence of German undersea technology and strategic requirements foreseen by naval planners. The Navy's historians hope that this case study of the problems and successes involved in a major weapons acquisition program will be of particular interest to naval personnel involved in that process today as well as to representatives of the industrial firms that supply the needs of the modern Navy. American Industrial Policy William R. Nester, 2016-07-27 What is the government's proper role in the economy? Do free or managed markets best promote economic development? Who can best pick industrial winners and losers, the government or private sector? This book attempts to answer those and related questions by exploring the evolution and results of federal policies towards half a dozen economic sectors Those policies are largely determined by the representatives of the targeted industry bureaucrats from agencies and departments that administer that industry and politicians with firms from that industry in their districts These iron triangles capture a virtuous political economic cycle in which they use their united power to grant themselves favourable policies which in turn enhances their power As will be seen the results of such a politicized industrial policy process varies considerably from one industry to the next
