multinational teams have become an important strategic and structural element of organizational work in our globalized world today. These teams are demonstrating their importance from the factory floors to the boardrooms of contemporary organizations. The emergence of multicultural teams is evident across a variety of organizations in the private public and civil society sectors. These developments have led to an increasing interest in the theory and practice of multicultural teams. Management educational and training programs are giving increasing attention to these developments. At the same time there is emerging interest in research about and study of multicultural teams. This book emerged from our teaching research and consulting with multicultural and diverse teams in multiple sectors over the last several years. In particular we have developed and refined our ideas about the concepts in this book from teaching an advanced course called Effective Multicultural Teams in the Graduate Program at the School for International Training SIT in Vermont. We have learned from the rich background of students who are from and have worked in six continents and who are or plan to be working in the public educational not for profit and for profit sectors. Additionally we have engaged with a variety of teams through our consulting and training providing consultation to teams in a variety of sectors and continents as they struggled to become more effective.

Stires, 1991 Team Performance in Health Care Gloria D.

Heinemann, Antonette M. Zeiss, 2012-12-06 The idea of teamwork in health care emerged at several times during the 20th century as the result of shifts in the nature and demands of health care and societal needs Examples include medical and surgical teams serving the military in World War II primary care teams staffing Community Health Centers created by President Johnson's War On Poverty and geriatric care teams established to serve the rapidly growing number of aging citizens Collaborative teamwork surfaced as a rational solution to health care needs but political and economic consensus to support widespread implementation was lacking The increasing complexity of providing health care seemed best served by the skills and efforts of interdisciplinary teams but such care was viewed as expensive so evaluation of its effectiveness became essential There were major problems in conducting such evaluation however First no clear theory guided the concept and practice of teamwork Early attempts to employ theoretical constructs explaining the behavioral and organizational phenomena of teamwork borrowed from theories of group dynamics communication organizational development and general systems Further few reliable validated instruments existed to evaluate team process function or effectiveness The best early efforts at research and evaluation came from academic centers funded by the Office of Interdisciplinary Programs of the Bureau of Health Professions 1975-78 and from the Veterans Affairs Interprofessional Team Training Development Program
