Building Without Borders Sustainable Construction For The Global Village:

Building Without Borders Joseph F. Kennedy, 2004 In cities and countries around the world billions of people live in slums and shanty towns doomed by ongoing poverty to grossly inadequate shelter Solving the global housing crisis has become one of the most urgent imperatives of our time but doing so without creating problems of ecological degradation and lack of empowerment is a major challenge Building Without Borders describes the pioneering efforts of those who have taken up this challenge to great effect It surveys numerous projects that are housing the homeless without destroying natural habitats to do so by drawing upon local traditions The book travels from Africa and Latin America through India China and Thailand as well as Poland and the Southwest of the United States Including contributions from over thirty experienced practitioners its focus is upon locally sustainable building covering aspects of international development appropriate technology technology transfer and teacher training and a special focus on the use of natural building for displaced populations refugees and in disaster mitigation Highly illustrated and popular in style it includes case studies technical information and the latest thinking on truly sustainable construction With an appendix that outlines the remarkable work of Builders Without Borders as well as a complete listing of further resources Building Without Borders will find an eager readership among development professionals affordable housing groups and appropriate technologists as well as architects designers natural builders and housing advocates

Eco-Homes Doctor Jenny Pickerill, 2016-01-15 It is widely understood that good affordable eco housing needs to be at the heart of any attempt to mitigate or adapt to climate change This is the first book to comprehensively explore eco housing from a geographical social and political perspective It starts from the premise that we already know how to build good eco houses and we already have the technology to retrofit existing housing Despite this relatively few eco houses are being built Featuring over thirty case studies of eco housing in Britain Spain Thailand Argentina and the United States Eco Homes examines the ways in which radical changes to our houses such as making them more temporary using natural materials or relying on manual heating and ventilation systems require changes in how we live As such it argues it is not lack of technology or political will that is holding us back from responding to climate change but deep rooted cultural and social understandings of our way of life and what we expect our houses to do for us

Sustainable Water Resources in the Built Environment Marilyn Waite, 2010-04-29 Sustainable Water Resources in the Built Environment covers elements of water engineering and policy making in the sustainable construction of buildings with a focus on case studies from Panama and Kenya It provides comprehensive information based on case studies experimental data interviews and in depth research The book focuses on the water aspects of sustainable construction in less economically developed environments It covers the importance of sustainable construction in developing country contexts with particular reference to what is meant by the water and wastewater aspects of sustainable buildings the layout climate and culture of sites the water quality tests performed and results obtained the design of rainwater harvesting systems and policy considerations The book is a useful resource for practitioners in the field working on the water aspects of sustainable construction international aid agencies engineering firms working in developing contexts intergovernmental organizations and NGOs It is also useful as a text for water and sanitation practices in developing countries Visit the IWA WaterWiki to read and share material related to this title <http://www.iwawaterwiki.org/xwiki/bin/view/Articles/SustainabilityinWaterSupply>
