Building The Workers Paradise The Design Of American Company Towns:

Building the Workingman's Paradise Margaret Crawford, 1995 This innovative and absorbing book surveys a little known chapter in the story of American urbanism the history of communities built and owned by single companies seeking to bring their workers homes and place of employment together on a single site By 1930 more than two million people lived in such towns dotted across an industrial frontier which stretched from Lowell Massachusetts through Torrance California to Norris Tennessee Margaret Crawford focuses on the transformation of company town construction from the vernacular settlements of the late eighteenth century to the professional designs of architects and planners one hundred and fifty years later Eschewing a static architectural approach which reads politics history and economics through the appearance of buildings Crawford portrays the successive forms of company towns as the product of a dynamic process shaped by industrial transformation class struggle and reformers efforts to control and direct these forces Company Towns in the Americas

Oliver Jürgen Dinius, Angela Vergara, 2011-01-01 Company towns were the spatial manifestation of a social ideology and an economic rationale The contributors to this volume show how national politics social protest and local culture transformed those founding ideologies by examining the histories of company towns in six countries Argentina Firmat Brazil Volta Redonda Santos Fordl ndia Canada Sudbury Chile El Salvador Mexico Santa Rosa R o Blanco and the United States Anaconda Kellogg and Sunflower City Company towns across the Americas played similar economic and social roles They advanced the frontiers of industrial capitalism and became powerful symbols of modernity They expanded national economies by supporting extractive industries on thinly settled frontiers and as a result brought more land natural resources and people under the control of corporations U S multinational companies exported ideas about work discipline race and gender to Latin America as they established company towns there to extend their economic reach Employers indeed shaped social relations in these company towns through education welfare and leisure programs but these essays also show how working class communities reshaped these programs to serve their needs The editors introduction and a theoretical essay by labor geographer Andrew Herod provide the context for the case studies and illuminate how the company town serves as a window into both the comparative and transnational histories of labor under industrial capitalism Exploring Everyday Landscapes

Andrew T. Carswell, 2012-06-13 The second edition of the Encyclopedia of Housing has been updated to reflect the significant changes in the market that make the landscape of the industry so different today and includes articles from a fresh set of scholars who have contributed to the field over the past twelve years City of Wood James Michael Buckley, 2024-11-19

2025 John Brinckerhoff Jackson Prize Association of American Geographers How San Franciscans exploited natural resources such as redwood lumber to produce the first major metropolis of the American West California s 1849 gold rush triggered creation of the instant city of San Francisco as a base to exploit the rich natural resources of the American West City of Wood examines how capitalists and workers logged the state's vast redwood forests to create the financial capital and construction materials needed to build the regional metropolis of San Francisco Architectural historian James Michael Buckley investigates the remote forest and its urban core as two poles of a regional city This city consisted of a far reaching network of spaces produced as company owners and workers arrayed men and machines to extract resources and create human commodities from the region's rich natural environment Combining labor urban industrial and social history City of Wood employs a variety of sources including contemporary newspaper articles novels and photographs to explore the architectural landscape of lumber from backwoods logging camps and company towns in the woods to busy lumber docks and the homes of workers and owners in San Francisco By imagining the redwood lumber industry as a single community spread across multiple sites a City of Wood Buckley demonstrates how capitalist resource extraction links different places along the production value chain The result is a paradigm shift in architectural history that focuses not just on the evolution of individual building design across time but also on economic connections that link the center and periphery across space
