Armstrong's Fight for FM Broadcasting: One Man Vs Big Business and Bureaucracy Don V. Erickson, 1973

Early FM Radio Gary L. Frost, 2010-04-01 The commonly accepted history of FM radio is one of the twentieth century's iconic sagas of invention, heroism, and tragedy. Edwin Howard Armstrong created a system of wideband frequency modulation radio in 1933. The Radio Corporation of America (RCA) convinced that Armstrong's system threatened its AM empire, failed to develop the new technology and refused to pay Armstrong royalties. Armstrong sued the company at great personal cost. He died despondent, exhausted, and broke. But this account, according to Gary L. Frost, ignores the contributions of scores of other individuals who were involved in the decades-long struggle to realize the potential of FM radio. The first scholar to fully examine recently uncovered evidence from the Armstrong v. RCA lawsuit, Frost offers a thorough revision of the FM story. Frost's balanced, contextualized approach provides a much-needed corrective to previous accounts. Navigating deftly through the details of a complicated story, he examines the motivations and interactions of the three communities most intimately involved in the development of the technology: Progressive-era amateur radio operators, RCA and Westinghouse engineers, and early FM broadcasters. In the process, Frost demonstrates the tension between competition and collaboration that goes hand in hand with the emergence and refinement of new technologies. Frost's study reconsiders both the social construction of FM radio and the process of technological evolution. Historians of technology, communication, and media will welcome this important reexamination of the canonic story of early FM radio.

Radio After the Golden Age Jim Cox, 2013-09-30 What became of radio after its Golden Age ended about 1960? Not long ago, Arbitron found that almost 93 percent of Americans age 12 and older are regular radio listeners, a higher percentage than those turning to television, magazines, newspapers, or the Internet. But the sounds they hear now barely resemble those of radio's heyday when it had little competition as a mass entertainment and information source. Much has transpired in the past fifty-plus years: a proliferation of disc jockeys, narrowcasting the FM band, satellites, automation, talk, ethnicity, media empires, Internet streaming, and gadgets galore. Deregulation, payola, HD radio, pirate radio, the fall of transcontinental networks, the rise of local stations, conglomerate ownership, and radio's future landscape are examined in detail. Radio has lost a bit of influence, yet it continues to inspire stunning innovations.

Fireside Politics Douglas B. Craig, 2000-11-02 Fireside Politics delivers an account of the ways radio metamorphosed into a medium of political action, a force that affected campaigning, governing, and even ideas of citizenship and civility.

Radio and Television Regulation Hugh R. Slotten, 2003-04-30 From AM radio to color television, broadcasting raised enormous practical and policy problems in the United States, especially in relation to the federal government's role in licensing and regulation. How did technological change, corporate interest, and political pressures bring about the world that station owners work within today and that tuned-in consumers make profitable? In Radio and Television Regulation, Hugh R. Slotten examines the choices that confronted federal agencies, first the Department of Commerce then the Federal Radio Commission in 1927 and seven years later the Federal Communications Commission and shows the impact of their decisions on developing technologies Sloten analyzes the policy debates that emerged when the public implications of AM and FM radio and black and white and color television first became apparent His discussion of the early years of radio examines powerful personalities including navy secretary Josephus Daniels and commerce secretary Herbert Hoover who maneuvered for government control of the wireless He then considers fierce competition among companies such as Westinghouse GE and RCA which quickly grasped the commercial promise of radio and later of television and struggled for technological edge and market advantage Analyzing the complex interplay of the factors forming public policy for radio and television broadcasting and taking into account the ideological traditions that framed these controversies Sloten sheds light on the rise of the regulatory state In an epilogue he discusses his findings in terms of contemporary debates over high resolution TV

Commission, 1941-1960 Susan L. Brinson, 2004-05-30 The Red Scare at the FCC started when James Lawrence Fly led the agency in many important decisions that were inspired by the New Deal These decisions outraged both the broadcasting industry and politically conservative legislators causing them to accuse the FCC of Communist sympathies This book analyzes the political transition taken by the FCC that turned it into an agency that fully participated in the Red Scare of the 1950s This book analyzes many significant FCC cases and policies that have never been considered within the context of New Deal policymaking or its impact This work is the first to look into the impact of the Red Scare on an executive agency Its combination of new archival and behind the scenes information makes this book a great addition to the growing body of research on media history and regulation

Making Connections Charles T. Meadow, 2002-02-11 Meadow takes us on a Cook's tour of communication technologies across time_ the alphabet and moveable type printing cave drawings and carrier pigeons telephones television and of course the Internet In each case Meadow shows how these and other devices are connected to each other even as they serve to make connections between people Part One discusses the basics of communications while Part Two delves into telecommunications before the days of steam and electricity Part Three offers insight into steam electricity and internal combustion energy and how they revolutionized society Communication is the key to a productive world For those dazzled by the pace of change in the technology or McLuhan's unorthodox but brilliant insights Meadow's casual style and pace provide the perfect antidote
