Amongst the medieval fighting manuals remaining to us, Ars Gladitoria represents not only a fine late 15th century extension of Fiore de Liberi's Flos Duellatorum--upon which it appears to have been based--but it may also prove to be an interesting transitional work linking Vadi's "ancient masters," with the more "Renaissance" techniques familiar from the later manuals.

While he might be transitional, there is more than enough medieval material to interest medieval reenactors, Western martial artists, and students of medieval history: To start, the manuscript dates from the late 15th century: It addresses not only fighting in and out of harness--probably reflecting the spectrum of combatants medieval fencing masters dealt with--but also with the philosophy of fighting of the moral strength required by the man at arms.

The manuscript itself, which resides at the Biblioteca Nazionale in Rome, consists of 78 leaves that illustrate the techniques included in the (very rough) text that follows. We've put this rough text up so that its accessible, as many of the more prominent Western Martial Arts instructors--such as the redoubted Paul MacDonald--make extensive use of Vadi as a key source. The Chivalry Bookshelf now has this manuscript in production; it will be printed in hardcover with full-color facsimile reproductions of each leaf plus a much more advanced translation, together with introductory notes and translations of the captions and footnotes on interpretations.

*While Vadi's system is not as complete as Liberi's (c. 1410), it possesses a measure of maturity and a clarity of sentiment with a beauty of its own, an elegance reflective of the proto-Renaissance Italian culture upon which it is based. For reenactors and Western martial artists, it will prove valuable both for the wonderful, exceptionally clear plates, for the techniques themselves--which I suspect will prove to be uniquely transitional--for the fascinating and complex segno that describes proper fighting mindset, and for the arms and armour shown in the plates.*

The Chivalry Bookshelf is also proud to be presenting the Liberi--also in early 2002. Together with the Vadi, they represent what we know today about the fighting arts in Italy in the late 14th and 15th centuries.

Ars Gladitoria Swordsmanship:

Medieval Swordsmanship John Clements,1998-11 From the author of Renaissance Swordsmanship comes the most comprehensive and historically accurate view ever of the lost fighting arts of Medieval knights warriors and men at arms Based on years of extensive training and research in the use of European swords it contains highly effective fighting techniques for the sword sword shield long sword great sword pole arm and more And with more than 200 illustrations and rare historical documents it is a scholarly reference as well as a hands on training guide for martial artists of all levels

Paulus Hector Mair's Ars Athletica Volume 2 Paulus Hector Mair,2024-12-31 To those who study the physical culture of arms in medieval Europe the German Fechtbucher treatises on combat arts are among the most important surviving documentary sources no other region in Europe produced such an extensive body of writings on the techniques of medieval combat Among these and indeed among the martial arts treatises produced by any culture the massive compendia commissioned by the scholar swordsman Paulus Hector Mair 1517 1579 stands out as uniquely ambitious and monumental The text survives in three manuscript copies each consisting of two volumes with each manuscript running to approximately 1200 pages and includes about 17 weapon forms depending on how one counts them from two handed sword to rapier armoured combat to sickle and scythe each form consists of anywhere from 8 to 136 lavishly illustrated techniques in many cases followed by one or more seminal texts on the form The various weapon forms are mutually integrated with each other in techniques and vocabulary and collectively offer an enormous volume of interpretable material The combination of text and image in the illustrated techniques offers obvious advantages to the understanding of a physical practice and Mair is unique among the German masters in systematically giving instructions to both combatants so that as one learns how to perform a technique they also learn how to counter it Lastly one of the most important features of the Ars Athletica is the Latin translation which serves as something of a Rosetta stone for interpreting the vocabulary of these long lost martial arts In this series Dr Jeffrey Forgeng translator of the equally seminal Fechtbucher of Joachim Meyer and Hans Leckuchner has compiled a team of translator practitioners to tackle Mairs opus Over a decade of work has gone into transcribing translating and annotating the Ars Athletica Treatise on the Martial Arts presenting both the original German and Latin as well as a modern English translation Volume Two of this series presents the Dusack a sporting version of the older Langesmesser long knife a single edged utility sword characteristic of the German speaking areas of Europe Made sometimes of wood sometimes of leather occasionally of steel the Dusack was the training weapon for all single handed swords Mairs 44 Dusack sequences contained herein represent one of the earliest surviving treatises on this weapon previous texts tend to focus on the Messer and readers will find Mair ends this section by including his own redaction and treatment of some of the most famous Messer texts of the previous century
