

Art at the Heart: Creating a Meaningful Art Curriculum for Young Children

Deborah P. Johnson, Principal, The Little Raccoon School, a private, progressive, Montessori school in the Washington, DC Young 5 School

Journal of Art Education

As I reflect on the last 10 years of my professional life, I think about the impact of my work on the lives of the children and the adults who have been part of my journey. I have been fortunate to work in a variety of settings, from public schools to private schools, and I have seen the power of art in education. I have seen how art can be a powerful tool for learning, for self-expression, and for building a sense of community. I have seen how art can be a powerful tool for teaching children about the world around them, and how it can be a powerful tool for helping them to understand their own place in the world. I have seen how art can be a powerful tool for helping children to develop their own sense of identity and to build their own self-esteem. I have seen how art can be a powerful tool for helping children to learn about the world around them and to understand their own place in the world.

Many of the children I have worked with have been from low-income families, and I have seen how art can be a powerful tool for helping them to develop their own sense of identity and to build their own self-esteem. I have seen how art can be a powerful tool for helping children to learn about the world around them and to understand their own place in the world. I have seen how art can be a powerful tool for helping children to develop their own sense of identity and to build their own self-esteem. reimagine and reconstruct a more equitable and just system for all who receive and provide care to our nation's youngest of children. When historically marginalized child care workers are held in high esteem then and only then will America live up to its promise of liberty and justice for all. Book Features Centers the historic and current oppression of Black people in the United States as foundational to the disregard for childcare workers today. Uses Paulo Freire's critical consciousness framework to guide readers to see, analyze, and act. Calls for a multiracial coalition of activists for racial justice, gender justice, and economic justice. The roadmap has been drawn but it requires inspired and knowledgeable advocates to implement. Read, be inspired, build community, and take up the mantle for change. From the Foreword by Barbara T. Bowman, Erikson Institute. Contributors: Rebecca Berlin, Sarah R. Bussey, Michael Gramling, Ed Greene, Iheoma U. Iruka, Alexis Jemal, Denisha Jones, Hakim M. Rashid, Joey Saunders, and James C. Young.

Young Children and the Arts Carol Korn-Bursztyn, 2012-04-01. Young Children and the Arts: Nurturing Imagination and Creativity examines the place of the arts in the experiences of young and very young children at home and in out-of-home settings at school and in the community. There is great need for development of resources in the arts specifically designed to introduce babies and toddlers to participatory experiences in the visual arts, dance, music, and storytelling theater. This book presents valuable guidelines for early childhood teachers, families, caregivers, and community organizations. Young Children and the Arts presents a comprehensive approach to the arts that is aligned with early childhood developmentally appropriate practice and that combines an exploratory materials-based approach with an aesthetic education approach for children from birth to eight years of age. It addresses both how the arts are foundational to learning and how teachers and parents can nurture young children's developing imagination and creativity. The models presented emphasize a participatory approach introducing young children to the arts through activities that call for engagement, initiative, and creative activity. Additionally, Young Children and the Arts addresses the intersection of early childhood education and the arts at points of convergence and at moments of tension. The role of families and communities in developing and promoting arts-suffused experiences for and with young children are addressed. Young Children and the Arts examines the role of innovative arts policy in supporting a broad-based early arts program across the diverse settings in which young children and their families live, work, and learn.

Literacy Development in Early Childhood Beverly Otto, 2019-02-14. Widely recognized as a leading text in its field, this popular guide explores literacy development beginning in infancy and through fourth grade. The latest edition continues to prepare teachers to create and implement literacy-rich curricula in early childhood classrooms while providing updates to federal legislation and highlighting the impact of state standards on educational settings. Recent technology is integrated into activities used to enhance literacy competencies. Throughout the book, the author's approach to reflective teaching empowers teachers to become effective decision makers and thoughtful mediators in children's transactions with literacy A conceptual and theoretical foundation for describing reading and writing processes is followed by research based descriptions of the signs of emergent literacy and developmentally appropriate instructional strategies The emphasis on linguistic and cultural diversity includes an array of approaches for supporting English language learners Chapter extension activities challenge readers to apply concepts through observation research curriculum development and discussion Sample observation and assessment forms assist in determining children s progress in developing literacy
