Creating The Customer Driven Car Company:

Creating the Customer-driven Car Company Karl E. Ludvigsen, 1996 This book is based on author Karl Ludvigsen's premise that consideration of customer needs as a first priority in every aspect of the auto business is not only possible but essential for future success profitability. He calls this philosophy customerizing. This book comprehensively explains what it takes to build a customer driven company. While the examples used are taken from the automotive industry, the customerizing concepts described in the book can be applied to virtually any industry. Creating the Customer-driven Car Company Karl E. Ludvigsen, 1996 The car industry is witnessing an irreversible transition from the sellers market of the 1980s to the buyers market of the 1990s and beyond. Throughout the world, customers are taking control of car companies. Executives and managers are realizing that a new approach to all their customers can provide a vital competitive advantage. Creating the customer driven car company explains clearly why and how customers should and must drive the whole process of creating, building, selling, and servicing cars. Karl Ludvigsen, a leading expert in the area, gives specific recommendations for managing this change and enhancing business performance.

Customer Retention in the Automotive Industry Michael D. Johnson, Andreas Herrmann, Frank Huber, Anders Gustafsson, 2012-12-06 The intensely competitive global automotive industry is in the midst of both a quality evolution and management transformation. In an evolutionary fashion, industry attention has progressed from a focus on internal quality to external perceptions of customer satisfaction to subsequent customer retention and profitability. More transformational is the change in the way automotive companies operate and manage themselves. An industry once dominated at a product level by engineering and a management level by finance is becoming a cross functional customer oriented industry. Understanding the links from quality to satisfaction to retention has become a key to financial and organizational success as the automotive industry enters the new millennium. We are fortunate in this regard to have assembled a diverse group of both academic and automotive industry contributors to offer a variety of insights into these links. After describing the ongoing changes in the automotive industry in more detail, this introductory chapter describes a framework for linking quality, satisfaction, and retention. The framework is used to introduce each of the individual chapters and highlight its contribution. Although our primary emphasis is on the automotive industry, the implications of the research and lessons learned extend far beyond. If anything, the automotive industry is a prototypical competitive global industry that faces a myriad of business issues. These include, among others, issues pertaining to product development, service development, process improvement, product quality, service quality, supplier relationships, internal customer satisfaction, external customer satisfaction, retailing, promotion, pricing, franchising, and technology management.

Customer-driven Manufacturing Johan C. Wortmann, D.R. Muntslag, P.J.M. Timmermans, 2012-12-06 Customer driven manufacturing is the key concept for the factory of the future. The markets for consumer goods are nowadays marked by an increase in variety while at the same time showing steadily decreasing product life cycles In addition tailoring the product to the customer s needs is becoming increasingly important in quality improvement These trends are resulting in production in small batches driven by customer orders Customer driven Manufacturing adopts a design oriented approach splitting the realisation of customer driven manufacturing into three main steps Firstly you must understand the primary process of your business The second step is to analyse and re design the management and control of the organisation Finally the organisation s information system must be analysed and redesigned
