How Not to Be Eaten Dr. Gilbert Waldbauer, 2012-02-13 All animals must eat But who eats who and why or why not Because insects outnumber and collectively outweigh all other animals combined they comprise the largest amount of animal food available for potential consumption How do they avoid being eaten From masterful disguises to physical and chemical lures and traps predatory insects have devised ingenious and bizarre methods of finding food Equally ingenious are the means of hiding mimicry escape and defense waged by prospective prey in order to stay alive This absorbing book demonstrates that the relationship between the eaten and the eater is a central perhaps the central aspect of what goes on in the community of organisms By explaining the many ways in which insects avoid becoming a meal for a predator and the ways in which predators evade their defensive strategies Gilbert Waldbauer conveys an essential understanding of the unrelenting coevolutionary forces at work in the world around us Anti-locust Bulletin ,1972 Report of the Anti-Locust Research Centre Anti-Locust Research Centre (Great Britain),1961 Pesticides Abstracts and News Summary ,1962 New Strategies in Locust Control S. Krall,R. Peveling,B.D. Diallo,2012-12-06 In the late eighties large scale control operations were carried out to control a major desert locust upsurge in Africa For the first time since the banning of organochlorine pesticides these operations relied mainly on non persistent pesticides such as organophosphates and pyrethroids The amount of pesticides sprayed and the area covered were probably the highest in the history of locust control and raised criticism with respect to efficacy economic viability and environmental impact As a consequence applied research into the problem was intensified both at the national and the international level with the goal of finding new and environmentally sound approaches and solutions to locust and grasshopper control Emphasis was laid on developing new control agents and techniques New Trends in Locust Control S. Millions of Monarchs, Bunches of Beetles Gilbert Waldbauer, 2000 Insects that are the least bit social may gather in modest groups like the dozen or so sawfly larvae feeding on a pine needle or they may form huge masses like a swarm of migratory locusts in Africa or a cloud of mayflies at the edge of a midwestern lake or river Why these insects get together and what they get out of their associations are questions finely and fully considered in this learned and entertaining look at the group behavior and social lives of a wide array of bugs The groups that Gilbert Waldbauer discusses here are not as complex or tightly organized as the better known societies of termites wasps ants and bees Some like the mayflies come together merely because they emerge from the water in the same place at the same time But others like swarms of locusts are loosely organized the individual insects congregating to migrate together for distances of hundreds of miles And yet others form a simple cooperative society such as the colony of tent caterpillars that weaves a silken tent to house the whole group Waldbauer tells us how individuals in these and other insect aggregations communicate or don't how they coordinate their efforts how some congregate the better to mate how some groups improve the temperature and humidity of their microenvironment and how others safeguard themselves or the future of their kind by amassing in such vast numbers as to confound predators As engaging and authoritative as Waldbauer's previous books Millions of Monarchs Bunches of Beetles will enlighten and delight those who know their insects well and those who wish to know them better General Catalogue of Printed Books British Museum.
