Sexual Violence Elizabeth L. Jeglic, Cynthia

Calkins, 2016-10-24 The purpose of this edited volume is to examine the disconnect in the sexual violence prevention field between legislation research and practice The work is focused primarily on United States policies and initiatives with key case studies internationally Contributions show that current policies are mainly based on repeat offenders residence restrictions registration and notification statutes and post sentence initiatives While these initiatives address public fears they are not evidence based and do not necessarily reduce offending Research shows that post sentence policies may destabilize offenders and limit their ability to reintegrate with society at a critical period therefore increasing the chances of recidivism Furthermore the majority of sex crimes 95% are committed by first time offenders This innovative book is divided into two parts juxtaposing what is currently being done legislatively with what the research evidence suggests would be best practice

Failure to Protect Eric S. Janus, 2006 Shows that sexual predator laws which have intense public and political support are counterproductive Janus contends that aggressive measures such as civil commitment and Megan's law which are designed to restrain sex offenders before they can commit another crime are bad policy and do little to actually reduce sexual violence Further these new laws make use of approaches such as preventive detention and actuarial profiling that violate important principles of liberty Janus argues that to prevent sexual violence policymakers must address the deep seated societal problems that allow it to flourish From publisher description
