Asian Voyages:

Asian Voyages O. R. Dathorne, 1996-07-22 O R Dathorne pursues the phenomenon of contact or encounter particularly as it relates to China and the islands of the Pacific Ocean He looks at how the Chinese have perceived their Other as heathen and exotic and how the West has in turn similarly perceived the Chinese The failure of the West to relate to China in human terms is subtly documented and is contrasted to the European experience in the New World and the African encounter of both China and the West Dathorne breaks new ground in his analysis of the construct of the Other on the Pacific Islands Using indigenous oral accounts early texts of European explorers and castaways and imaginative accounts he reconstructs the period of contact from the native viewpoint of those who acted as translators pilots guides chartmakers and male and female companions He calls attention to the Western habit of romancing the place while denigrating or mythologizing the people

Maritime History as Global History Maria Fusaro, Amélia Polónia, 2017-10-18 This study aims to provide new insights into the connections between maritime history and global history It demonstrates the significance of maritime activity as a conduit of global exchange by examining local national and international interdependencies and trade networks and a broad range of time periods geographical areas and various sub divisions of maritime historical research It is composed of ten essays with an introductory chapter and concluding chapter The first five essays discuss the effects globalisation on shipping in the early modern period the following three discuss maritime transportation and the economics of industrialisation from the nineteenth century to the present day the next discusses the impact of global entrepreneurialism on maritime history the penultimate discusses the connections and variables between maritime and global history and the concluding chapter examines the theoretical assumptions surrounding the two disciplines using the globalisation of Early Modern Spain as a case study to do so The study demonstrates that the core strength of maritime history is its essential place in global history and that the process of globalisation began at sea

Seafaring, Sailors and Trade, 1450-1750 G.V. Scammell, 2024-10-28 This second volume of articles by G V Scammell offers new insights into the history of British and European shipping in the centuries of Europe's penetration into the oceans of the world from the 15th to the 18th century It examines the building ownership and operation of merchantmen in the context of economic and social developments of the period combining this with the investigation of the vital but still comparatively neglected subjects of the lives working conditions beliefs skills and behaviour of seamen This is the basis for discussion of the means and methods by which British shipping and merchants established themselves in oceanic trades including those of other powers considered in relation to the growth of British maritime and commercial supremacy The final studies then examine the causes and consequences of European and British seaborne expansion particularly in Asia

Slavery in East Asia Don J. Wyatt, 2023-01-05 In premodern China Korea Japan and Vietnam just as in the far less culturally cohesive countries composing the West of the Middle Ages enslavement was an assumed condition of servitude warranting little examination as the power and profits it afforded to the slaver made it a convention pursued unreflectively Slavery in medieval East Asia shared with the West the commonplace assumption that nearly all humans were potential

chattel that once they had become owned beings they could then be either sold or inherited Yet despite being representative of perhaps the most universalizable human practice of that age slavery in medieval East Asia was also endowed with its own distinctive traits and traditions Our awareness of these features of distinction contributes immeasurably to a more nuanced understanding of slavery as the ubiquitous and openly practiced institution that it once was and the now illicit and surreptitious one that it intractably remains

Dutch Ships in Tropical Waters Robert Parthesius, 2025-10-01 The end of the 16th century saw Dutch expansion in Asia as The Dutch East India Company the VOC was fast becoming an Asian power both political and economic By 1669 the VOC was the richest private company the world had ever seen This landmark study looks at perhaps the most important tool in the Company trading its ships In order to reconstruct the complete shipping activities of the VOC the author created a unique database of the ships movements including frigates and other hitherto ignored smaller vessels Parthesius's research into the routes and the types of ships in the service of the VOC proves that it was precisely the wide range of types and sizes of vessels that gave the Company the ability to sail and continue its profitable trade the year round Furthermore it appears that the VOC commanded at least twice the number of ships than earlier historians have ascertained Combining the best of maritime and social history this book will change our understanding of the commercial dynamics of the most successful economic organization of the period

Sino-French Trade at Canton, 1698-1842 Susan E. Schopp, 2020-11-02 Sino French Trade at Canton 1698 1842 presents a rare and lively view of the French experience at Canton and calls for a reappraisal of France's role in that trade France was one of the two most important Western powers in the eighteenth century and was home to one of the three major European East India companies Yet the nation is woefully underrepresented in Canton trade scholarship Susan E Schopp rescues the French from the sidelines showing that they exerted a presence that though closely watched by their rivals is today largely unrecognized Their contributions were diverse ranging from finding new sea routes to inspiring the renovation of hong fa ades Consequently to ignore the French or to dismiss them as simply also rans results in a skewed perception of the Canton system Schopp also demonstrates that while the most distinctive aspect of the French model of company trade was the dominant role of the state indeed the French East India Company has been memorably described as a Versailles of trade this did not rule out a place for legitimate and sometimes surprising participation by the private sector On the contrary France's commercial relations with China were inaugurated by private traders and the popularity of the Canton trade spurred the eventual demise of the company model Backed up by extensive archival work Schopp's work demonstrates a remarkable understanding of the Sino European trade and her book reveals an unparalleled passion for the role of seamanship in history It is shocking how little has been written in any language about French trade in China so this excellent book fills a tremendous need It has the potential to become a classic monograph of lasting significance an outstanding work that will make a strong imprint on the historiography Tonio Andrade Emory University Schopp s valuable study shows that the French ought not to be considered also rans in European trade with China The French way was in fact a distinctive model of European trade with China one different from that of the better known English East India Company The author s comprehensive research takes the reader into the material history of the French trading vessels the hong and the personnel involved in the trade Robert Aldrich University of Sydney Reports from the Consuls of the United States ,1886
