collection Vaginal Surgery for Incontinence and Prolapse Philippe E. Zimmern, Francois Haab, Christopher R. Chapple, 2007-12-09 Imagine the plight of a young woman some time during the thousands of years before the mid 18 century who soon after a difficult childbirth finds she can no longer keep from leaking urine She is standing in the chill winter wind her urine soaked clothes clinging wet against her thighs as she comforts her crying baby knowing that she faces a life of misery shame and social ostracism Or imagine the middle aged wife of a tenant farmer on the remote central Illinois plain straining with her husband to lift a heavy log that has fallen on their only milk cow only to feel a deep tearing sensation and discover a large mass protruding between her legs Gripped by fear she cannot know what has happened to her or how she will care for her family if she can no longer help with the difficult tasks needed to live We must be grateful to the generations of physicians before us who have pioneered treatments and developed preventions for the pelvic floor disorders that have affected women throughout time Each decade during the last 150 years has brought new insights new operations and new medicines to help women who suffer from these debilitating conditions At first surgical treatments were so dangerous that they could only be suggested for the most severe of cases but advances in anesthetic and surgical safety now make them available to the majority of women Federal Register , 1983-04-25 How Organisations Measure Success Neil Carter, 2002-01-22 Throughout the 1980s the British Civil Service devoted much time and energy developing indicators to measure the performance of government Never before had so much stress been placed on accountability and performance a trend which will be reinforced as government continues to devolve activities to agencies and looks for methods to assess their performance How Organisations Measure Success analyses existing methods from their origins in the 1960s to their revival in the 1980s as part of the Financial Management Initiative and its apotheosis in the 1990s Next Steps Initiative How Organisations Measure Success reports on two years of field research funded by the Economic and Social Research Council and will be of great interest to students of social policy and public administration as well as professionals working in government and public sector management Assessing the TMDL Approach to Water Quality Management National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Water Science and Technology Board, Committee to Assess the Scientific Basis of the Total Maximum Daily Load Approach to Water Pollution Reduction, 2001-08-24 Over the last 30 years water quality management in the United States has been driven by the control of point sources of pollution and the use of effluent based water quality standards Under this paradigm the quality of the nation's lakes rivers reservoirs groundwater and coastal waters has generally improved as wastewater treatment plants and industrial dischargers point sources have responded to regulations promulgated under authority of the 1972 Clean Water Act These regulations have required dischargers to comply with effluent based standards for criteria pollutants as specified in National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System NPDES permits issued by the states and approved by the U S Environmental Protection Agency EPA Although successful the NPDES program has not achieved the nation's water quality goals of fishable and swimmable waters

largely because discharges from other unregulated nonpoint sources of pollution have not been as successfully controlled. Today pollutants such as nutrients and sediment which are often associated with nonpoint sources and were not considered criteria pollutants in the Clean Water Act are jeopardizing water quality as are habitat destruction, changes in flow regimes and introduction of exotic species. This array of challenges has shifted the focus of water quality management from effluent based to ambient based water quality standards. Given the most recent lists of impaired waters submitted to EPA, there are about 21 000 polluted river segments, lakes and estuaries making up over 300 000 river and shore miles and 5 million lake acres. The number of TMDLs required for these impaired waters is greater than 40 000. Under the 1992 EPA guidance or the terms of lawsuit settlements, most states are required to meet an 8 to 13 year deadline for completion of TMDLs. Budget requirements for the program are staggering as well, with most states claiming that they do not have the personnel and financial resources necessary to assess the condition of their waters, to list waters on 303d and to develop TMDLs. A March 2000 report of the General Accounting Office (GAO) highlighted the pervasive lack of data at the state level available to set water quality standards to determine what waters are impaired and to develop TMDLs. This report represents the consensus opinion of the eight member NRC committee assembled to complete this task. The committee met three times during a three month period and heard the testimony of over 40 interested organizations and stakeholder groups. The NRC committee feels that the data and science have progressed sufficiently over the past 35 years to support the nation's return to ambient based water quality management. Given reasonable expectations for data availability and the inevitable limits on our conceptual understanding of complex systems, statements about the science behind water quality management must be made with acknowledgment of uncertainties. This report explains that there are creative ways to accommodate this uncertainty while moving forward in addressing the nation's water quality challenges.

true effectiveness of EU sanctions against a range of states including Belarus Zimbabwe Moldova Uzbekistan the USA and China He demonstrates that focussing purely on behavioural change is limiting especially when considering the actions and motivations of an international organisation and develops a process to evaluate the direct and indirect impact of EU sanctions Giumelli demonstrates the many different ways sanctions have been used by the EU to produce positive direct and indirect results and provides a multi level framework to assess the success of sanctions in the future
