The Constitutional Convention was held in 1787 in Philadelphia. It was a meeting of delegates from the thirteen original states to discuss the Articles of Confederation and to propose a new constitution. The convention was called by the Continental Congress, which was the governing body of the United States at the time.

The delegates met for five months, from September 1787 to September 1788. They debated and drafted the Constitution, which was signed on September 17, 1787. The Constitution was then sent to the states for ratification. It was ratified by the states in 1788 and became the supreme law of the United States.

The Constitution established a new federal government with three branches: the executive, the legislative, and the judicial. It also established a system of checks and balances to prevent any one branch from becoming too powerful.
