Possessions With Notes on Their Habits Of recent years the study of nature has become popular and widespread in America

Not only is Nature Study taught in many of the schools but the publications relating thereto have become very numerous

Unfortunately these various treatises apply wholly or in large part to the birds insects animals and plants of the mainland few or none of which are found in the Hawaiian Islands Such publications are hence of comparatively little use to island teachers and pupils or to the Islanders generally There being at present no popular work upon Hawaiian birds the present little volume has been prepared with the view of break ing ground in this department and with the hope that it may prove of assistance to those who are already bird lovers and as well may stimulate others to become such For superbly illustrated volumes upon Hawaiian birds the read er is referred to the fine works issued by Mr Walter Rothschild and by Mr Scott B thousands of scientists are devoted to bird research while amateur enthusiasts called birdwatchers or more commonly birders probably number in the millions Birds are categorised as a biological class Aves The earliest known species of this class is Archaeopteryx lithographica from the Late Jurassic period According to the most recent consensus Aves and a sister group the order Crocodilia together form a group of unnamed rank the Archosauria Phylogenetically Aves is usually defined as all descendants of the most recent common ancestor of modern birds or of a specific modern bird species like Passer domesticus and Archaeopteryx Modern phylogenies place birds in the dinosaur clade Theropoda Modern birds are divided into two superorders the Paleognathae mostly flightless birds like ostriches and the wildly diverse Neognathae containing all
