Dale Guthrie,2005 Publisher Description Beasts of the Earth E. Fuller Torrey,Robert H. Yolken,2005-02-03 Humans have lived in close proximity to other animals for thousands of years Recent scientific studies have even shown that the presence of animals has a positive effect on our physical and mental health People with pets typically have lower blood pressure show fewer symptoms of depression and tend to get more exercise But there is a darker side to the relationship between animals and humans Animals are carriers of harmful infectious agents and the source of a myriad of human diseases In recent years the emergence of high profile illnesses such as AIDS SARS West Nile virus and bird flu has drawn much public attention but as E Fuller Torrey and Robert H Yolken reveal the transfer of deadly microbes from animals to humans is neither a new nor an easily avoided problem Beginning with the domestication of farm animals nearly 10 000 years ago Beasts of the Earth traces the ways that human animal contact has evolved over time Today shared living quarters overlapping ecosystems and experimental surgical practices where organs or tissues are transplanted from non humans into humans continue to open new avenues for the transmission of infectious agents Other changes in human behavior like increased air travel automated food processing and threats of bioterrorism are increasing the contagion factor by transporting microbes further distances and to larger populations in virtually no time at all While the authors urge that a better understanding of past diseases may help us lessen the severity of some illnesses they also warn that given our increasingly crowded planet it is not a question of if but when and how often animal transmitted diseases will pose serious challenges to human health in the future Encyclopedia of Human Evolution and Prehistory Eric Delson,Ian Tattersall,John Van Couvering,Alison S. El Mirón Cave, Cantabrian Spain Lawrence Guy Straus, Manuel R. González Gonzales Morales, 2012-04-16 Though known as a site since 1903 El Mirón Cave in the Cantabrian Mountains of northern Spain remained unexcavated until a team from the universities of New Mexico and Cantabria began ongoing excavations in 1996 This large deeply stratified cave allowed the team to apply cutting edge techniques of excavation recording and multidisciplinary analysis in the meticulous study of a site that has become a new reference sequence for the classic Cantabrian region The excavations uncovered the long history of human occupation of the cave extending from the end of the Middle Paleolithic through the Upper Paleolithic up to the modern era This volume comprehensively describes the background information on the setting the site the chronology and the sedimentology It then focuses on the biological and archaeological records of the Holocene levels pertaining to Mesolithic Neolithic Chalcolithic and Bronze Age Archaeologists anthropologists and historians will be drawn to this study and its extensive findings dated by some seventy five radiocarbon assays

Palaeoart of the Ice Age Robert G. Bednarik, 2017-08-21 The many hundreds of books and thousands of academic papers on the topic of Pleistocene Ice Age art are limited in their approach because they deal only with the early art of southwestern Europe This is the first book to offer a comprehensive synthesis of the known Pleistocene palaeoart of six continents a phenomenon that is in fact more numerous and older in other continents It contemplates the origins of art in a balanced manner based on reality rather than fantasies about cultural primacy Its key findings challenge most previous perceptions in this field and literally re write the discipline Despite the eclectic format and its high academic standards the book addresses the non specialist as well as the specialist reader It presents a panorama of the rich history of palaeoart stretching back more than twenty times as long in time as the cave art of France and Spain This abundance of evidence is harnessed in presenting a new hypothesis of how early humans began to form and express constructs of reality and thus created the ideational world in which they existed It explains how art producing behaviour began and the origins of how humans relate to the world consciously
