based on internationalisation and decentralisation are opposed to the nature of the most important resource knowledge. The acquisition and exchange of tacit knowledge relies on interpersonal interactions and is thus time and place dependent. Given that the combination of heterogeneous knowledge stocks furthers innovation, organisations develop strategies to ensure the transfer of knowledge. To enable intra-organisational knowledge flows, spatial mobility at the workplace affects a wide range of employees. The study examines in which ways spatially mobile employees i.e. expatriates contribute to those knowledge flows. The study of ego networks reveals not only social dynamics of knowledge transfer but the geographical framework allows to discuss knowledge flows from a spatial perspective. On the one hand, the empirical results confirm their knowledge transfer function. On the other hand, the relational geographical perspective reveals that expatriates do not represent a homogeneous group but their roles in the knowledge transfer process, the geographical reach of their networks and their knowledge resources depend on job knowledge, individual and space-related factors.
