Public Works of Art Project United States. Dept. of the Treasury, 1934 Arizona Sketches J. A. Munk, 2022-09-20
Reproduction of the original Paths of the Mound-Building Indians and Great Game Animals Archer Butler Hulbert, 2022-09-16
In Paths of the Mound Building Indians and Great Game Animals Archer Butler Hulbert intricately weaves together the rich tapestry of Native American history and the ecological dynamics of North America's indigenous wildlife. Employing a meticulous style that blends historical narrative with ethnographic detail, Hulbert examines the ceremonial and practical significance of the ancient earthen mounds constructed by these cultures. As he navigates through time, the book situates the mound builders within a broader environmental context, reflecting on the interactions between these communities and the diverse game animals that populated their landscapes, which ultimately shaped their existence and beliefs. Archer Butler Hulbert was an esteemed historian and explorer whose passion for understanding Native American cultures and their intricate relationships with the environment culminated in this seminal work. His extensive research, informed by firsthand observations and an array of primary sources, allowed him to offer a unique perspective on the interconnectedness of humans and nature during a critical period in North American history. Hulbert's lifelong commitment to uncovering the history of the American frontier provided a rich backdrop for his exploration of the mound builders' legacy. This book is highly recommended for those interested in Native American history, anthropology, and ecological studies. Hulbert's engaging prose and thoughtful analysis not only illuminate the lives of the mound builders but also invite readers to reflect on the enduring impact of these practices on contemporary environmental discourse. Sedona Verde Valley Art Lili DeBarbieri, 2015-04-27
